Beer? No. Sales Tax? Yes.
A. P. Sloan's New Idea.
Yellow Paper and Green.
China Big, Japan Small,
But—

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE EFFORT to take prohibition out of the Constitution and get beer for you and hundreds of millions in beer taxes for Uncle Sam fell flat.

But if you are interested in national finance you will be glad to hear that the sales tax is coming, also a cut in extravagant government expenditures.

President Hoover, in his annual message, demands both.

There is no doubt that the sales tax will do more to balance the budget and put Uncle Sam back on his financial feet than anything else, beer included.

THE BOOTLEGGERS will be delighted to hear that the proposition, if beer comes, is to make it 2.75 beer. For the working men, who are the natural consumers of beer, that would be only "near beer," in the sense that it is nearer to water than to real beer.

THERE IS no doubt that General Motors and Fisher Brothers, automobile body builders, have a new idea that will command attention all over the world.

Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, invited this writer yesterday afternoon to test the working of the new idea in a 1933 Buick, driving fifty miles an hour across the new George Washington Bridge over the Hudson River. With wind blowing through the Palisades from the north, or up from the ocean through the narrows, that is as windy a spot as you will find east of the Rockies.

Mr. H. J. C. Henderson, of "Fisher Bodies," drove the car, with the learned Mr. Berkowitz sitting beside him, while Mr. Sloan on the back seat, demonstrated what is beyond question a highly important engineering development.

Briefly, an arrangement of draught control in the four front and rear windows of the car makes it possible to manage circulation of air absolutely, doing away with "back draughts" that start millions of colds, especially in older people, by chilling the back of the neck.

Doctors will be interested in this development for their patients' sake. The common cold is the cause and beginning of innumerable fatal illnesses, and Mr. Sloan's "draught control" will work wonders for health. Life insurance companies could well afford to make him a present of twenty million dollars and they wouldn't begin to divide with him what this new idea will save in death losses.

Mr. Sloan informs you that this new device will be part of every 1933 General Motors car.

THIS GOVERNMENT owes and has outstanding interest-bearing obligations amounting to more than TWENTY THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS and costing the people in interest charges nearly one thousand million dollars a year.

Has our present depression anything to do with that gigantic "freezing" of funds?

Suppose, only SUPPOSE that the government should thaw out some of that frozen money?

SUPPOSE THE government should call in for payment ten billions of the bonds to start with, and pay for them with ten billions of nice new money?

You could not call that inflation because the government's indebtedness would not be increased. It would owe 10 billions for new green money bearing no interest, instead of owing 10 billions for yellow bonds paying interest. Taxpayers would save four hundred million dollars a year.

And those that receive perfectly good cash for their bonds would have to invest the 10 billions in some other way.

WOULD THAT investing of 10 billions help the depression? Would it improve values? The writer doesn't know, he merely ASKS.

But he DOES know this, that government indebtedness would not be increased, and therefore its credit could not be damaged. It would owe 10 billions on green paper paying no interest, instead of owing 10 billions on yellow paper costing in interest four hundred million dollars a year. If that be inflation, make the most of it.

"Japan stole that great territory from me by violence and murder."

Japan replies:

"I did it in self defense."

As an American you are interested in the fact that China's 400,000,000 are helpless against Japan's 60,000,000 BECAUSE JAPAN IS PREPARED.

THE UNION Pacific Railroad, built up by the late E. H. Harriman, largely owned by his heirs, is said to have bought 100,000 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock, recently, thus becoming the biggest individual owner of the Pennsylvania stock.

That step in the direction of railroad merger by stock purchase will interest railroad men and shippers.

There ought to be one big railroad company in the United States, just as there is one great postoffice, owned by the government, with just compensation to the private owners. That probably would suit many of them, just now, in the era of no dividends.

Failing that, the best thing would be to have the fewest possible competing railroads, with as little unnecessary overhead as possible, the people, of course, regulating rates.

REALTORS DEMAND TAX CUT

BEER URGED IN HOUSE AS JOB AID

Legalized Brew Would Give 300,000 Work, House Told

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Witnesses for brewers depicted beer as a bringer of good tidings for business and the federal Treasury in the opening of testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee today on the Collier bill.

Advocating a brew of 4 per cent alcohol by volume, Levi Cooke, of Washington, and R. A. Hubert, of St. Louis—on behalf of the United States Brewers Association—estimated a $5 a barrel tax would enrich the Treasury by $330,945,000 a year.

Addressing the powerful committee, but turning now and again to the crowded audience, Huber said the beer he supported could be sold for 9 cents a bottle, and that its legalization would cause $360,000,000 to be spent to rehabilitate breweries and 300,000 men would be given work.

ESTIMATES CAPACITY

With the present brewing capacity in the country at 15,000,000 barrels annually, he said, a 40,000,000- barrel capacity would be needed before long.

Following Cooke's testimony that the 2.75 per cent beer by weight provided in the bill placed before the committee by Chairman Collier was insufficient in alcoholic content, Huber said a 3.2 per cent beer was a better product. The latter would be 4 per cent by volume.

In addition to the 300,000 men he estimated would be given employment in the wholesale and retail distribution of the product, Huber said many other workers, including coal miners, and railroad employes, would be given increased employment.

TAX 'REASONABLE'

The $5 a barrel tax proposed in the Collier bill was "reasonable," Huber said, if states and cities did not place an additional tax on it so that it would become so costly it could not be purchased by laborers.

Asked by Representative Crowther (Rep.), of New York, if by legalizing beer, bootlegging would be eliminated, Huber said:

"I believe it won't except to the degree of consumption other sorts of liquors are reduced by those drinking beer.

"I don't think anything but a miracle could stop bootlegging, until all sorts of liquors are legalized.

"We don't claim beer is a panacea. It's not going to solve the bootleg problem, and it is not going to solve the unemployment problem, and it is not going to solve the farm relief problem, but it will minimize them to some degree."

WIFE DENIES DRINKING CHARGE

She Hurled Things, Crooner Says in 'Cruelty' Claim

Dick Powell, the flappers' idol, whose megaphoned croonings graduated him from a neighboorhood theater in East Liberty to Hollywood, no longer need fear that his wife will throw things at him.

For the young man who used to sing in the church choir no longer has a wife. He was divorced, more or less secretly, in his native Little Rock, Ark., it was learned today.

INVADES HOLLYWOOD

After four years of success in Pittsburgh theaters, Powell packed his megaphones 10 months ago and departed for Hollywood under a Warner Brothers option. Since then he has appeared as a juvenile in two pictures, "Blessed Event," with Lee Tracy, and "Too Busy to Work," starring Will Rogers.

PARTED LAST YEAR

He testified that he and his wife had separated in Pittsburgh in July, 1931. When he was asked to explain how his wife had acted cruelly toward him, he replied:

"Continued fuss and abuse—would get mad frequently and throw things at me. Was a user of alcoholic drinks very excessively and frequently."

Mrs. Powell did not contest the suit, but entered a general denial of the charges.

'Ambulance-Chasing' Charged in Petition For Disbarment

Disbarment of Attorney David S. Keilly was asked today in a petition presented to Judge Harry H. Rowand in Common Pleas Court by a committee chosen by the Allegheny County Bar Association to investigate alleged "ambulance-chasing" practices of members of the bar.

Keilly was accused in the petition of seeking out persons who suffered injuries or damages and persuading them to bring their causes or claims to the offices of attorneys suggested by "runners."

JUDGE GRANTS RULE

Judge Rowand granted a rule on Keilly to show cause why he should not be removed from office as attorney. The rule is returnable 20 days after notice has been served.

The petition cited 31 cases, giving the names of plaintiffs and defendants, in support of the plea for disbarment. It alleged that "runners" were compensated by Keilly either by payment of a fixed sum, or by a percentage of the amounts realized in handling the cases. Persons named as having dealt directly with Keilly as "runners" were D. K. McKnight, J. W. Brady, George Brady, Edward Martin, Robert W. Miller and Joseph W. Morrow.

The petition further alleges Keilly made settlement of claims of clients under authority from them, "but in violation of his duty to such clients, and has mingled the money received by him in such settlements with his own, and has withheld payment from his clients until such time as he has been forced to disgorge or find it convenient to do so."

MONEY CHARGES

Keilly also was accused of having deducted from money received by him in payment of judgments or in settlement of cases or claims of clients, charges made by hospitals in which clients have received treatment. This, it was

GROUPS JOIN IN WAR ON BUDGET

$6,000,000 Slash Asked In Council; Drastic Pay Paring Sought

Demands of the taxpayers for slashing the city budget, one of them calling for a 20 per cent pay cut for all employes from the Mayor down, were presented to Council today.

The Pittsburgh Real Estate Board asked that taxes be cut three mills.

The Building Owners' and Managers' Association called on Council to cut $6,054,538 from Mayor Kline's $25,000,000 budget and that the tax levy be reduced to 18 mills on land and nine mills on buildings. This would be a cut of five mills from this year's rate on land.

DRASTIC DEMANDS

The demands of the Building Owners and Managers, presented this afternoon by James W. Bamford, want beyond even the drastic cuts recommended previously by the Real Estate Board.

The Building Owners asked that the payroll be reduced $4,182,800; that this year's deficit which they estimated at $3,000,000 be funded with short term notes so as not to affect the 1933 millage; that all city pensions be suspended pending reorganization of the entire system; that conservatories and the city garage be closed and that all employes from the mayor down take a 20 per cent pay cut, effective January 1.

Wholesale drastic reductions and eliminations including the wiping out of the Department of Welfare were urged in a letter by R. L. McKallip, chairman of the Community Research Bureau of the Real Estate Board.

ESTIMATES DENOUNCED

The Kline estimates are dubbed an "alleged budget" calling for "extravagant expenditures in the face of the present economic crisis showing "either a total lack of knowledge of present conditions,

HOOVER SENDS CUT BUDGET

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—A general manufacturers' sales tax o. 2¼ per cent on everything except food was recommended to Congress today by President Hoover in transmitting a budget that calls for expenditures of $4,218,808,344 during the next fiscal year.

The President reported the new budget carries net estimates of $580,000,000 below those for the current fiscal year, but even this enormous reduction, he pointed out, is insufficient to meet the still more enormous deficit, which is expected to be well over a billion dollars by June.

In addition to the 2¼ per cent sales tax, which he estimated would produce $355,000,000 a year, the President proposed continuation for another year of the federal gasoline tax, which he cal-

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—For the fourth time since the Lateran treaty was signed, Pope Pius crossed the frontiers of Vatican City into Italian territory this afternoon.

Women Anti-Drys Advocate Beer Bill

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Immediate passage of a "beer bill" to relieve unemployment and to provide revenue for the national treasury was urged today for the first time by the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

BORAH ASSAILS HOME LOAN ACT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—A bill to repeal the Home Loan Bank act and abolish the system created at the last session of Congress for liberalizing home mortgage conditions was introduced today by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho.

Introducing the bill, Borah told the Senate the act had proved "wholly unsatisfactory." He added:

"It is not reaching and will not reach the home owner or those really in need of assistance."

Opposing Borah's proposal, Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, said President Hoover had made a "great mistake" in placing two "national bankers" on the bank board. Of the board's chairman, Franklin Fort, he said:

"This board hasn't had a fair chance because its lame duck head has been devoting his time to other things."

Senate O. K. on Best Sought by Hoover

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The name of William E. Best, of Pittsburgh, today was sent to the Senate for confirmation as director of the Federal Home Loan Bank System by President Hoover.

The general opinion on Capitol Hill, however, is that neither Best nor other directors of the system will be confirmed at the short session of Congress.

Teacher 'Kept In,' Janitor Demoted

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The unusual procedure of a teacher being "kept after school" has resulted, Board of Education officials have announced, in the demotion of Edwin J. Clements from the position of janitor to that of fireman.

Clements, board members said, locked the teacher in a classroom because he thought "she was staying too long after school."

WELFARE FUND TOPS GOAL

The Welfare Fund today reported pledges which assure it of continued operation through 1933, with at least $3,000 more than is asked for its budget of $2,480,000.

The figure of $2,483,108 was announced today at the report luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce building, bringing to end a campaign which commenced the day after election and was set to end November 23. Two extensions of a week each were necessary to reach the goal.

Further contributions, not reported as yet, are expected to swell the figure by several thousands.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The newspaper Paris Midi said today it had learned that the former Empress Zita of Austria had consented to the transfer of the ashes of L'Aiglon, Napoleon's son, from Vienna to Paris.

The Austrian government has taken the position that only the former imperial family has the right to pass on this matter.

Hopis on 'Warpath' Against Navajos

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The Hopis of Arizona are on the warpath again, disputing territorial rights with the Navajos.

Their tomahawks, however, as wielded before the Senate Indian Committee today by two chiefs in full buckskin dress, were fashioned of rhetoric and argument. The Hopis want a reservation of their own or clearly defined Hopi grazing land within the Navajo reservation, where they now are.

Jail Mother of 5 For Sale of Beer

Mrs. Catherine Hrabsky, 49, of 438 St. Clair street, Clairton, mother of five children, was convicted in Federal Court of selling and possessing high test beer and was sentenced by Judge R. M. Gibson to 30 days in jail. The woman said she thought she was selling near beer.

COLD WAVE DUE, SNOW ON WAY

A 30-degree drop in temperature was in prospect tonight, carrying the mercury to between 25 and 30 degrees.

Rain, which fell at intervals today, was to be supplanted by light snow. Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted, with the coming of the cold.

Cloudy and continued cold weather will prevail tomorrow, he said, with likelihood this district will experience a temperature below 20 tomorrow night.

Lupe, Weismuller See Bout Together

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Lupe Velez has renewed her friendship with Johnny Weismuller, champion swimmer recently turned film actor. They were together at last night's boxing program which featured Mickey Walker and Arthur De Kuh.

Lupe gave Johnny quite a beating as she sat at the ringside and shadow boxed in an attempt to stir Walker to greater action. Walker won by a knockout in the first round.

Many Killed In Mine Blast

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—An explosion in the Morgan Coal mine at Madrid, N. M., 40 miles north of here, caused death today to a number of miners, early estimates ranging from 80 to 90.

All available ambulance equipment and physicians were rushed from Albuquerque.

The company's office at Albuquerque reported "eight or nine" miners were killed, but unofficial reports placed the number as high as 90. Passengers on a train at Domingo, who were in Madrid this morning, said they understood about 70 men were killed.

Cermak Resents 'Slur' By Geneva Freshman

Chided by a Geneva College freshman because of his attitude toward the prohibition laws, particularly in Chicago, Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of that city, today had replied to the student. He wrote:

"I think you are worrying too much about Chicago public affairs. A close attention to your studies at Beaver Falls will result in greater benefits to your country and yourself than attempts to guide the administration of public affairs in Chicago."

In his letter to Cermak, the student, John A. Griffiths, of 1502 Twenty-first avenue, Beaver Falls, accused Cermak of being one of the principal owners of the famous old Pilsner Brewery and anxious to "make a dollar and damn a soul."

Griffiths told Mayor Cermak his lack of respect for law enforcement encouraged gangsters. He wrote:

"Last summer you went across the ocean to your native land. You were the representative of our proudest cities and states. Several days after your arrival there a picture of you holding a glass of beer to your lips was published in America. You had the effrontery to go across the ocean and there by your actions mock our laws and our ideals."

Rioting of Reds, Nazis Breaks Up Reichstag

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—Meeting to vote on a Communist nonconfidence motion against Gen. Kurt Von Schleicher's government, the Reichstag broke up in a turmoil today with political partisans fighting in the galleries and on the floor of the chamber.

The battle started in the spectators' gallery shortly after President Hermann Wilhelm Goering called the session to order.

The cause of the fracas was a statement by Ernst Schneller, a Communist deputy, charging that President von Hindenburg was a shameless exploiter of the labor class."

Nazis and Communists began arguing among themselves in the gallery and words soon gave way to blows. A number of Communist deputies rushed into the gallery to aid their constituents while the President vainly shouted for order.

Capt. Goering ordered the galleries cleared. Before officers had time to carry out the command, a number of Nazi storm troops swept into the spectators' gallery to augment the outnumbered Nazis.

This was the signal for a general melee, in which several Reichstag ushers were injured.

$500,000 BANK SECURITIES SALE WAITED

3 Agencies in Search For Holdup Gang With Few Clues

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Banks and security companies were watched today for the possible appearance of bonds and stocks included in the lot seized by five masked bandits who yesterday overpowered and robbed a special postoffice messenger and his guard.

Should any attempt be made to negotiate the stolen securities, authorities hope to obtain some clue to the identities of the daring gunmen who carried out the sensational holdup within the shadows of the postoffice.

Value of the registered mail seized by the robbers was set at between $400,000 and $500,000 by E. E. Brown, vice president of the First National and the First Union Trust and Savings banks, to whom the mail was being delivered.

The banker said negotiable securities in the loot amounted to between $150,000 and $200,000, but that the robbers would probably encounter great difficulty and risk in any attempts to convert the securities into cash.

The currency obtained in the robbery was estimated at about $2,000.

The only solid clues which federal, state and city officials possessed in their hunt for the criminals were descriptions of two of the robbers supplied by the victims, Fred Voelsch, the messenger, and Frank Statsny, the guard, whose revolver was taken from him during the holdup. Voelsch and Statsny described two of the bandits as men about 25 years old.

Government undercover men, assisted by city police and Secret Six agents, mustered their forces in a relentless effort to run down and capture the robbers.

stated, has caused embarrassment to the clients.

The petition alleges Betty McClintock was solicited by Martin following an accident. In a claim to the Aetna Insurance Company for $5,000, Keilly alleged the girl could walk only on crutches, the petition stated. At the time of the demand, according to the petition, Keilly was aware that his client had recovered and did not require crutches. The petition also stated Miss McClintock threw away her crutches immediately after the company settled for $1,000. The settlement was not made through Keilly.

The petition charged Keilly failed to notify Michael McHugh, his client, that the Pittsburgh Railways Company had settled for $2,025 the damage suit which grew out of a trolley accident in 1929 in which McHugh was injured.

DAMAGE CASE CITED

The petition stated:

"Keilly deliberately informed his client that the Pittsburgh Railways Company would not settle the case, but had taken an appeal from the action of the lower court, though the defendant had not at that time, and did not later take an appeal."

The facts involving the automobile accident injuring James Green, a client, were altered in Keilly's claim to the Aetna Casualty Company the petition alleges. It was charged the case was solicited by Martin.

It also was charged the facts were altered in the case of a child injured by an automobile in Brighton road. The claim was presented to the Aetna Casualty Company. The case was solicited by Martin for Keilly, according to the petition.

disregard of them or a political maneuver."

Principal of the board's recommendations are these:

Fixing the 1933 tax levy at 20 mills on land and 10 mills on buildings, compared with the present rate of 23 mills on land and 11½ on buildings.

Elimination of Department of Welfare, it to be set up as a bureau of welfare in the Department of Health.

Elimination of mental health clinic.

Remaining payroll to have rate of pay cut directly, not through furloughs. This should save $3,000,000.

DEMAND POLICE CUT

Police Bureau to be cut by same number as last year—162—and payroll reduced to number actually needed to provide safety.

Personnel of fire bureau to be cut 98 men—same as last year.

Fifty per cent reduction of estimate for Carnegie Library—$547,000.

Elimination of Shade Tree Commission—$13,000.

Abolition of grants and donations for conventions and celebrations.

SCORE WATER PACT

Termination of agreement between city and South Pittsburgh Water Company which costs city $328,000 a year to pay difference in rates to company consumers within city.

Slashing appropriations for Bureau of Parks to provide only essential maintenance and police supervision.

Reduction in expense of maintaining City-County Building which board contends does not conform with wage scale in commercial office buildings.

R. T. Mackintosh, president of the Real Estate Board, told Council the board would "stand by" Council in any cuts made.

President John S. Herron told the real estate men:

"You won't have to be in suspense long. The zero hour is December 15."

Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Harry Bastow, president of the Allied Boards of Trade, added their demands for reduced taxes. Dunn decried any new taxes.

MAYVIEW MINING HIT

At the suggestion of Thomas Liggett Council voted to investigate the cost of mining coal at Mayview. Liggett said he understood it was costing $2 a ton and the city could save money by abandoning the mine.

City department heads thus far have volunteered reductions amounting to $1,167,464. The list was headed by Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, who yesterday submitted cuts totaling $830,863, with the possibility of further economies in the suggested consolidation of four departments.

TROTZKY MAKES TRIP BY RAIL

MARSEILLES, France, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Leon Trotzky, his wife, and members of the party which accompanied him on a brief visit to Copenhagen, left today by train for the Franco-Italian border on the way back to Turkey.

This morning the former Bolshevik leader refused to make the trip from here by water, asserting that Madame Trotsky was too ill to stand the 14-day voyage to Istanbul. The ministry of the interior granted permission for him to go by rail, providing the Italian authorities permitted him to cross their territory.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Franklin D. Roosevelt plans to make a thorough study of the whole structure of the federal government during a series of talks with experts he will call to Warm Springs late in January.

The plans of the President-elect were disclosed today shortly before he reached Washington for a 15-minute stop before speeding on to New York for a conference on state affairs tonight.

The President-elect feels that he should have a broader knowledge of the functions of various departments and bureaus that have been created, or whose work has been broadened, in the years that he has been away from the capital.

Flu Germs Thin Ranks Of Hollywood Stars

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—As if the motion picture studios hadn't troubles enough already, there's another on the rampage.

The germ of "flu," no respecter of persons, striking as gleefully at glamorous movie stars as it does at husky football teams, and leaving in its wake an industrial headache.

Flu doesn't give a sneeze for the theatrical battle cry, "The show must go on." So it frequently stops the show. The halting of production on a picture under way is costly, for the overhead lingers on.

When a star or important player goes "under the weather," the scenes in which that actor must appear are forgotten for the time, and sets are constructed hastily for other scenes. If hopes are realized, the flu attack has run its course before all such scenes are shot and production resumes its normal course.

This is called "shooting around" the star. They're shooting around Elissa Landi now in the Ronald Colman film. But Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, co-starring in another, were beset about the same time, complicating things.

HOOVER BACKER HITS DEBT CUT IN HOUSE

Congress to Decide Settlements, Says Treadway

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—In the first congressional debate on war debts this session, Representative Treadway (Rep.), of Massachusetts, said today in the House that "there has never been any intention on the part of the Congress, other than the moratorium of last year, that there should be any change or modification of these agreements."

Treadway urged payment on the basis of settlements already made.

Shortly before he spoke Secretary Stimson at the State Department received a new note from Belgium, renewing as England and France have already done, their requests for an extension of the Hoover moratorium to cover December 15 payments and for re-examination of the debt agreements.

Treadway, staunch administration supporter in the past, made no direct reference to the wish President Hoover has expressed for revival of the war debt funding commission, but said "Congress is the source of all authority in dealing with this subject." He said:

Herriot to Talk Debts With MacDonald

PARIS, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The American dollar went to a new high of 25.62 francs today and the pound sterling also improved to 82.75, presumably reacting to the uncertainty regarding the debts, but Premier Herriot said he would make no decision regarding debts policy until after he has talked tomorrow with Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain.

The dollar is now close to the point at which shipments of gold to the United States would be profitable.

The Premier was scheduled to discuss the debts tomorrow with the Foriegn Affairs and Finance Committees of the Chamber of Deputies, but he informed the members that his meeting with Mr. MacDonald will occupy most of his time tomorrow and he will appear before the committees on Friday.

U. S. COMMENDED

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Commendation of the American attitude on the debts was expressed today by Mario Alberti, Italian economist, in a two-column article printed by Il Sole, Milan's leading financial daily. He wrote:

"Why should America sacrifice herself on the altar of European folly?"

Referring to "the resumption of the armaments race which ended so tragically in 1914," he condemns the European view that America entered the war "for base, egotistical reasons."

On the contrary, he asserted, the United States came in "with the noblest intentions, which largely repaid the debt to Lafayette and France, a debt which too often is recalled."

ROXIE LONG HIT IN KIN'S STORY

Harry Kelly, brother-in-law of Roxie Long, taking the stand in his own defense in the rum conspiracy trial in Federal Court today, testified bad blood existed between them and that Long, a government witness, had threatened to "get him."

Kelly denied Long's story that Kelly had kissed him a few days prior to the opening of the trial, as evidence the two were friendly.

Kelly denied all charges of complicity in liquor operations. Others of the 23 defendants on trial to make denials were A. Kirshenbaum, J. G. Cancilla and Morris Lustig.

Phila. Council Cuts 900 From Payroll

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Loss of 800 members and possible resignation of Supt. William B. Mills today confronted the Philadelphia Police Department as City Council continued its drastic economy wave to balance expenditures and receipts.

Under the lash of complaining taxpayers, Council slashed 900 jobs from the Safety Department at a stormy meeting. All but about 100 of the positions were in the Police Department.

Bottled Highballs Shown at Beer Hearing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Real bottled highballs were exhibited before the House Ways and Means Committee during the beer bill hearing by Representative Celler (Dem.), of New York.

Arguing that a whisky highball, bottled, can be legalized under the Constitution, Celler had the United States Bureau of Alcohol prepare four samples.

One bottle contains a highball with 9 per cent alcohol, another 10 a third 11 and a fourth 15. Celler said one bottle won't make anybody drunk.

'Man in Gray' Hunted In Slaying on Yacht

Adventurer's Widow Tells of Quarrel On Tour

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Detectives announced today they believed they were near a solution to the slaying of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, globe trotter, suspected German spy and soldier of fortune, as they broadcast a nation-wide appeal for the apprehension of "Curley" Guy, identified as the "man in gray."

Guy emerged from a medley of suspects and motives as the central figure in the investigation when Mrs. Wanderwell told officers he recently fought with Wanderwell and threatened the life of the globe trotter. Guy, she said, was a former companion of her husband on a South American trip.

'MAN IN GRAY'

Harry Greenwood, gambling ship employe, identified a photograph of Guy as that of "the man in gray" whom he saw on a pier early yesterday shortly after Wanderwell was slain in the unlighted captain's cabin of his yacht Carma. The vessel was docked alongside the pier on the eve of its departure on a world cruise with a motley crew of adventurers. A man garbed in gray had inquired for the captain of the yacht shortly before Wanderwell was shot in the back. Guy, Mrs. Wanderwell said, had quarreled with her husband over finances.

Mrs. Wanderwell's story of her slain husband's differences with Guy was corroborated in Seattle by Eugene A. Babbitt, who said the man had attempted to kill Wanderwell during the fight. Seattle police sought two men acquaintances of Guy in an effort to locate him.

HUDDLE IN CABINS

While this development took place, the group of adventurers which had signed on as members of the crew—pretty women, some of them authors, some of them waitresses, and a collection of men ranging in class from a scion of British nobility to roustabout seasmen—huddled in the dank and untidy cabins of the Carma.

The party, including eight women and seven men, had been held by Long Beach police for nearly 24 hours as material "witnesses," that each might be questioned and cleared of the killing.

Capt. Wanderwell—the erstwhile Valerian Johannes Pieczynski—had purchased the former rum runner at a government auction. The 15 adventurers had signed on as members of the crew in order to avoid conflict with maritime laws, since federal authorities had declared the Carma unseaworthy and had threatened to stop the voyage.

While police searched for Guy, Mrs. Wanderwell stated the trip would not be canceled. She said:

"We will sail on Saturday. But we won't go unless I am sure the Carma is all right."

The new body will not only fight for reductions in local taxes through City Council, County Commissioners and the Board of Public Education, but will seek relief through state legislation.

MITCHELL ASKS SPEEDY ACTION ON DRY LAW

Changes Should Be Made at Once, If At All, He Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Citing that one of the principal arguments "against prohibition has been that it has created disrespect for the law," Attorney General Mitchell today recommended in his annual report to President Hoover that if any changes are to be made in the dry laws they be made as "quickly as possible."

The statement was the first of its kind by the Justice Department head since the Prohibition Bureau was taken from the Treasury and transferred to the Justice Department two years ago.

ATTITUDE UNSTATED

There was no indication in the recommendation of the attorney general's personal attitude toward proposed changes in dry laws, as each part of it hinged on the word "if."

He said:

"If any changes are to be made in our national system of prohibition two things are obvious: First, the changes, if any, should be made as quickly as possible; and, second, changes should be made through amendment of substantive law and not by leaving laws on the statute books and scuttling them by refusal to appropriate money for their enforcement.

"It is evident that the present state of the public mind will make the task of the officers of the law doubly difficult, and increase breakdown and disrespect for the law unless changes which are to be made are made speedily. Furthermore, one of the principal arguments against our prohibition system has been that it has created disrespect for the law, and nothing can be imagined which would tend more to create that disrespect than to have criminal statutes in force but relax the effort to enforce them."

LOCAL ENFORCEMENT

Mitchell discussed the question of crime and urged improvement of local justice machinery rather than expansion of federal activity. He said:

"The crime problem in this country is not to be solved by enlarging the scope of federal activity, but by improvement in local machinery of justice, supported or demanded by public opinion."

He also mentioned that sometimes one to three years were required to dispose finally of criminal cases after a verdict of guilty because of the machinery of appeals to higher courts. He called the situation "a grave reproach to our system of administration of criminal justice."

GET SELLERS, WOODCOCK AIM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—An objective of detecting and bringing to justice commercial rather than private violators of dry laws, has been set for the Prohibition Bureau by Director Amos W. W. Woodcock.

In his annual report today—the second since the bureau has been under the Justice Department—Woodcock said:

"This objective seems correct, both tactically and strategically—tactically because commercial violators may be reached by the law directly, whereas the purely private violators have many constitutional and statutory protections—strategically because the commercial violator is the source from which most private violations originate, and because commercial violators are the kind of offenders which our people expect the law to reach."

A total of 90,217 prohibition cases made by the bureau for the 1932 fiscal year, compared with 76,580 in the previous year, was reported by the prohibition director.

Old N. Y. Hippodrome Sold Under Hammer

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Dark for many months, almost forgotten in the clamor of sound and stage shows, the old Hippodrome went under the auctioneer's hammer today, sold for $100,000, plus about $3,000,000 more in judgments and back taxes.

This massive structure, on Sixth avenue between Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets, symbolized the grand era of stage spectacles.

Two westerners, Frederick Thompson and Skip Dundy, who "cleaned up" at the 1893 World's Fair in Chicago, built the Hippodrome. Its opening in April, 1905, was a spectacle they still talk about on Broadway—1,200 actors and a batch of elephants, lions and camels, all on the stage at one time in "A Yankee Circus in Mars."

In 1929, reports persisted that the Hippodrome would be torn down and an 83-story skyscraper built. But nothing developed.

The City Bank Farmers Trust Company bid in the playhouse today as plaintiff in a foreclosure action. No inkling forthcoming from the new owners as to what they would do with the place. It reopened recently and is now showing a combination of motion pictures and vaudeville.

FATE OF RIDING MASTER IN 'BETRAYAL' TRIAL NEAR JURY

RALPH H. SMITH YOUNGEST OF JUDGES HERE

34-Year-Old Lawyer's Appointment to Bench Praised

To Ralph H. Smith, appointed to the Common Pleas Court bench by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, goes an unusual honor. When Attorney Smith done his judicial robes and takes up his new duties he will be the youngest judge in the history of the local court.

Attorney Smith, although only 34 years of age, is well qualified for his new position, having served as assistant district attorney, assistant United States attorney and assistant attorney general and in addition teaches business law at the University of Pittsburgh.

Business and professional men alike were loud in their praise for Attorney Smith and also for Gov. Pinchot, whose brief telegram last night invited the North Side attorney to accept the position, made vacant through the retirement of Judge Joseph M. Swearingen. The formal appointment came today.

Surrounded by his wife, mother and his two children, Attorney Smith, spent a busy night answering telephone calls and receiving telegrams. Friends and associates by the score offered congratulations.

And today, somewhere north of Medix Run, Elk County, Harry Smith, father of the youthful jurist-to-be, is hunting, unaware of the honors shown his son. The father left about 10 days ago and will not return until the end of the week.

Smith has been deputy attorney general here for nearly two years. During that time he has handled nearly 200 cases. He has represented the state departments of Labor and Industry, Revenue, Health and Highways, the Securities Commission and Alcohol Permit Board.

Attorney Smith had the support of County Commissioner C. C. McGovern and received the preference of the Governor over Attorney W. Clyde Grubbs, who also had been suggested by McGovern. Smith was Pinchot's chairman in the Governor's election fight here.

The new judge was born on the North Side, educated in the Linwood and McNaugher schools, Allegheny High School and Cornell and Pitt universities. He studied law at Pitt and of recent years had been an instructor in business law there.

In 1923 he was appointed assistant district attorney by Samuel H. Gardner, then the district attorney, and since named Judge.

Referring to Judge Gardner, Attorney Smith said:

"It will be a real thrill for me to sit on the bench along with my old boss, Judge Gardner."

Later he was made assistant United States attorney, a position he held for several years. During the time he was assistant United States attorney, he handled hundreds of cases in Federal Court, among them the North Side "rum ring" trials.

OPPOSED PARK

A year ago he was candidate against District Attorney Andrew T. Park for that office, receiving more than 127,000 votes. He is a lieutenant in the United States Army Reserve, a member of Observatory Post, American Legion, and the Eighth United Presbyterian Church.

Attorney Smith lives at 2921 Perrysville avenue, a few blocks from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, 2421 Osgood street.

Mr. Smith said today:

"I probably will be officially notified within a few days and as soon as the papers are received I will be sworn in. I will seek the judicial nomination at the September primary.

"The best relief for a new appointee is to talk to his 4-year-old son, who doesn't give a darn. My wife told my son, Ralph, Jr., that I was going to be a judge. All he wanted to know was whether it would keep me away from supper and if I would be home on Sunday."

Attorney Smith admitted he was tickled pink. He sat in his living room talking to his friends who called to offer congratulations. He arose once to put on his coat, but was informed that dignity came with the new job and that did not start for a few days.

The new judge says he does not have any hobbies. He spends much of his time with his children, Ralph, 4, and Janet Terry, 8 months. He admits he is anxious to begin his new work and hopes to hear his first case in the room in which he tried his first case as an assistant district attorney.

KILLED IN FIGHT OVER $5 PRIZE

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Walter Bross, 19, was killed by a blow on the jaw during a free-for-all fight over the awarding of a $5 male popularity prize at a dance hall here early today.

Police took into custody the 165 patrons at the hall. Three of them—Michael Mangini, 22; Thomas Crossly, 22, and Frederick Bocchino, 22—were charged with homicide.

Hours after the melee, detectives still grilled the other dancers, most of them young men and girls, in an effort to learn the identity of Bross' assailant.

The trouble started when Louis Moffett, the manager, awarded the popularity prize to Thomas J. Richards, 27. Disappointed members of Bross' clique and other dancers engaged in a rough-and-tumble fight.

EUROPA SKIPPER DIES IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Capt. Nicolaus Johnsen, skipper of the North German Lloyd line's giant speed liner Europa, died today of complications following an attack of appendicitis.

The commander, veteran of sailing ship days, stuck to his post, despite severe pains, until last Saturday, when he collapsed and was operated upon while the ship was making a westward crossing of the Atlantic.

Johnsen, who was also commodore of the line's fleet, was 63 years old. In the old days, he rounded Cape Horn 13 times under sail and, although he was considered a martinet on the bridge, he was always solicitous for the welfare of his men and passengers.

WRITER BEFORE BRITISH COURT

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Compton Mackenzie, the noted British novelist, was formally committed for trial today on a charge of violating the dreaded "Official Secrets Act." Mackenzie was attached to the British intelligence service in Southeastern Europe during the war.

The novelist recently published a book, "Greek Memories," dealing among other things with his experiences in the intelligence service. The volume was withdrawn from circulation on the very day of issue and prosecution followed. The author in a statement to the court, said:

"My object was not financial gain, but to tell the truth about Venizelos (former premier of Greece) and the patriots who followed his lead 16 years ago. I thought it my duty to answer propaganda which for many years has been carried on in books against the allies and the Venizelist Greeks. I plead not guilty."

Bellevue Police Hit For Jailing Many Dogs

Thomas K. Hunter, at a meeting last night of Bellevue Council, complained:

"All the police do is catch dogs. The jail is full of them."

So the Department of Public Works was authorized to build a rude "bastile" to harbor straying canines which run afoul of the law. A suggestion by Burgess W. F. Cooley that an official dog catcher be appointed received no support.

T. R.'S WIDOW STOPS HERE

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former president and fifth cousin by marriage to the next president, passed through Pittsburgh early today on her way to join her son, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., governor general of the Philippines, for the holidays.

Traveling simply and accompanied only by a maid, Mrs. Roosevelt had left New York yesterday on her first trip to the Orient since the death of her husband. She expects to reach Manila in time to spend New Year's Day with her son.

Mrs. Roosevelt remained in bed while her train stopped in Pennsylvania Station.

Jail Man in Probe Of Duquesne Fire

Louis Smolovitz, 38, was held in County Jail today in connection with a fire in his store at 337 Second street, Duquesne, early Saturday, according to county detectives.

Smolovitz was committed to jail in default of $10,000 bail by Alderman Thomas M. Geary yesterday. The stock and fixtures were insured for $9,000, the detectives said.

LEVINE ALIMONY CUT ADVISED

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—A referee recommended today that Charles A. Levine, the trans-Atlantic plane passenger, be ordered to pay $135 a week alimony instead of the $1,000 weekly demanded by his wife, Grace B. Levine, pending settlement of her separation suit.

Mrs. Levine contended her husband earned more than $10,000,000 between 1920 and 1924, salvaging metal from ammunition under a contract with the government. Levine admitted his company grossed that amount, but said he personally netted much less and that he has been living on money borrowed on his $700,000 life insurance.

The referee, Jacobs A. Marks, filed his report for the approval of Justice Thomas W. Churchill in Supreme Court.

STATE B. E. F. SHUNS MARCH

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 7.—Dissension arose in the ranks of the B. E. F. today when the Pennsylvania department, under Commander C. A. Titterington, refused to join the bonus trek on Washington.

Titterington said he thought the order for the march was ill advised, and that the army was not in condition to make the trip at this time. He said:

"I question the advisibility of such a march insofar as it may affect the interests of the veterans. The time is not ripe for mass lobbying and such action, in my opinion, can only result disastrously and detrimentally to all war veterans."

Greentree Man Kills Self With Shotgun

Michael Kovacs, 30, shot and killed himself at his home, 113 Brunswick avenue, Greentree, this morning, according to a report to the Coroner. He died from a shotgun charge in the chest.

He was said to have been despondent. He was unmarried and lived with his parents.

MARCHERS JEER POLICE, QUIT CAPITAL

Demonstrators Happy Over Results of 'Invasion'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Truck after truck headed into the West and South today, taking the last of the shouting, singing demonstrators for unemployment relief over the long, tedious miles to their homes.

With a final jeer at the police who had confined them to a pavement encampment for three days, the men and women piled into their vehicles, stowed away blankets and said they were satisfied with the showing they had made.

POLICE VIGILANT

Police vigilance was not relaxed until the last truck was gone, and then, wearied by almost continuous duty since Sunday, the hundreds of Washington bluecoats sought their rest.

Every available policeman marched with the cheering and jeering demonstrators yesterday from their roped-off camp to the Capitol grounds and back. Strong lines held the marchers outside the grounds while select committees presented relief demands to Vice President Curtis and Speaker Garner.

Special police permission also was granted for 120 World War veterans among them to remain here for a few days.

Plans were laid by the leaders of this group to appear before Congress with petitions asking bonus payment and protesting the eviction of the bonus army by federal troops last July 28, after fatal riots.

VETS TO STAY

The permission was obtained by Emanuel Levine, leader of the so-called "rank and file veterans," from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Levine said he had made arrangements for housing the men at two different spots in the city.

Brown said his only condition was that the Health Department should certify the quarters the men would occupy to be sanitary.

John Pace, leader of the radical left wing of the B. E. F. during the bonus march, will take charge of the 120 men remaining in the city, Levine said. Others, he added, are coming here from various parts of the country.

GIRL'S FATHER DENOUNCED BY DEFENSE

Gibson Should Be One Tried, Homewood's Attorney Cries

International News Service.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Dec. 7.—When the sun goes down over the white-topped Courthouse here this evening Sidney Herbert Homewood will probably know whether Charlotte Ariel Gibson, his 23-year-old debutante accuser, has been successful in her attempt to send him to prison.

Miss Gibson, facing the ordeal of motherhood this month, was not expected to be in court to learn whether vengeance is to be hers.

She still sees the blond, youthful riding master through the rose-colored glasses of love, despite the four hours of testimony yesterday during which he branded her as a cold, calculating, worldly woman who pursued him at every turn.

GIRL DENIES CHARGES

Charlotte Gibson, serene and composed, took the stand for the third time late in the day to deny Homewood's charge that she had associated with other men and that he had actually found her in the arms of his cousin, Alec Homewood.

Robert Gibson, father of the society girl, has made his daughter the victim of his pride, Homewood's lawyer charged today. Robert Finkelstein, summing up the defense's case, shouted:

"If anyone should be prosecuted it should be Mr. Gibson, who forced her to be crucified on the cross of his pride by dragging her through the muck and mire and publicity of this trial.

"They could not make Sidney marry her, so they brought action against him. I can't see how it can do them any good. Since they can't have a name for the expected child, they want to brand it as the son of a convict!"

PROBLEM IN MORALS

The case presents a problem in modern morals, Finkelstein declared, adding:

"It resolves itself to this:

"Was Charlotte Gibson a member of the present age and generation or was she as prim, victorian, sedate and obedient as she claims?

"Is it possible for a girl so intelligent and well-read as she to be so unintelligent about sex matters?"

With this sentiment the defense summation closed, and District Attorney Henry V. Stebbins began summing up for the state.

He gave a warning that "if any group of men in Rockland County can call evil good and good evil, then the fabric of society is breaking down and our people are in danger!"

Judge Taylor, after dismissing the jury yesterday, held lawyers for both sides until he had told them the substance of the charge he would make to the jury. He said:

"The first question will be the character of Miss Gibson. If it is shown that it was not good before the night of March 1, I must order the jury to acquit. Should they decide that it was good up until the night of March 1, they still must consider other questions.

"If the jury decides that there was no promise of marriage on March 1, which was instrumental in inducing Miss Gibson to submit, they must acquit."

VOTE ON REPEAL SPURS FOES OF LAME DUCKS

By FRASER EDWARDS
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Defeat of the Garner prohibition repeal resolution in the House by "lame ducks" was expected today to give tremendous impetus to the drive for ratification of the Norris "lame duck" amendment by the states.

Already ratified by 17 states, the new amendment to the Constitution, which eliminates the short session of Congress, probably will be adopted by the required 36 before the end of next year as 43 legislatures meet in 1933.

The "lame ducks" who voted against the Garner resolution were bitterly criticized by members of the House and Senate, who cited the instance as new evidence for the ratification of the Norris amendment.

Speaker Garner, in blaming the lame ducks for rejecting his resolution, predicted the Norris amendment would be ratified by June 1 by 36 states and eventually by all 48. He said:

"Half of the votes against repeal were cast by 'lame ducks' who disregarded the overwhelming mandate of the people, expressed on November 8."

Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, pointed out "lame ducks" in a large majority of cases had been drys defeated by wets.

Representative Britten (Rep.), of Illinois, said:

"Only the prohibition party polled fewer votes than the Communist party in the last election. Such lame ducks will follow the lead of the fanatical Anti-Saloon League to its final resting place—oblivion."

Representative Loring Black (Dem.), New York, said:

GERMAN ARMS STAND WEIGHED

GENEVA, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Representatives of the five great powers engaged in informal discussion of disarmament today considered the form of Germany's future collaboration in the world disarmament conference, and the measures for arms limitation already suggested.

The German delegation has forwarded to Berlin the proposals advanced here, including the suggestions of Norman Davis, the American representative, and may receive a reply late in the day.

The Davis proposals are essentially an attempt to save what is possible out of President Hoover's plan for reduction of all arms by approximately one-third and to get the resulting arrangement into concrete form as soon as possible.

3RD U. S. JUDGE URGED HERE

A recommendation that Congress make permanent the third federal judgeship in the Western Pennsylvania district was to be made in Washington today by Attorney General William D. Mitchell, in his annual report, according to word received here.

The recommendation, if approved, will make the temporary appointment of Judge F. P. Schoonmaker permanent.

The appointment of Schoonmaker was made in 1922 to relieve a temporary congestion.

2 Motorists Seized In Gas Bill Evasion

Two early morning motorists needing gasoline for their automobile, but lacking funds, drove up to the A. D. Miller Service Station, Penn avenue and Barbeau way, were serviced and drove away without paying, according to a report to police.

Brentwood Firemen Name New Officers

Lencher and Frank Boomed for Judge

Attorney Benjamin Lencher and Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank are being boomed by friends for appointment to succeed the late Judge Thomas C. Jones of the County Court. Lencher ran fifth last year in the contest for four County Court vacancies, polling about 120,000 votes.

2 'Customers' Rob Gas Service Station

Two "customers" at the Heil Service Station, 2832 East street, early today turned guns on John Griser, 35, of 812 Blossom way, the attendant, and escaped with $16.

Griser told police the bandits were Negroes and drove an automobile bearing Ohio license plates.

RUPP ACCOUNT ALSO REJECTED

HARRISBURG, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The state elections bureau today rejected the expense account of Lawrence H. Rupp, Allentown, defeated Democratic candidate for United States Senator.

The account of Senator James J. Davis, successful Republican candidate, was rejected Monday.

Both failed to submit vouchers covering payments of items of more than $10 and have been notified that until this data is supplied, their accounts will not be accepted. They were directed to present the vouchers not later than tomorrow.

The penalty for failure to submit the vouchers, bureau officials said, is the barring of the winner from taking his seat.

Rupp reported one contribution of $350 and expenditures of $616.99. He has no unpaid obligations. He reported expenditures of $570 for traveling and $46 for telegraph, postage and telegraph tolls.

DAVIS OCCUPIES SENATE SEAT

By taking his seat, he ended speculation whether he would appear in the Senate before his trial on a charge of violating the lottery law. The trial was scheduled to start December 12.

A New York federal grand jury indicted the Pennsylvania junior Senator as director general of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Davis failed to appear in the Senate chamber Monday or yesterday. After leaving the Army-Navy football game Saturday in Philadelphia, he did not let his whereabouts be known generally.

JAPAN CHARGED WITH 50,000 ATROCITIES

(Editor's Note—As a result of the exclusive dispatches from Edward Hunter, International News Service correspondent in Manchuria, confirming the massacre of 2,700 Chinese peasants by Japanese troops near Fushun, the eyes of the world have been turned again toward the troubled situation in Manchuria.

The latest development in the chain of events which followed Hunter's revelations occurred today in London, where the Chinese Legation came forward with the charge that 50,000 Chinese civilians have been victims of Japanese atrocities in Manchuria since the seizure of Mukden in September, 1931.)

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The startling allegation that 50,000 Chinese civilians have been made victims of Japanese atrocities in various parts of Manchuria during the past year was made today by the Chinese Legation in London.

Citing communications from Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, the Manchurian military commander who was reported killed last July, but now appears to have escaped death, as well as evidence from other Chinese sources, Su Le Chang, of the legation staff, made his charges in a formal letter, which said:

"According to a message from Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, no less than 50,000 civilians have been the victims of Japanese atrocities in districts of Manchuria where Chinese volunteers have operated.

'HUMAN TRAGEDY'

"In the words of the general: 'It is a human tragedy unprecedented in the history of the world.'

"With regard to the merciless slaughtering of 2,700 peasants in the Fushan district, the Chinese government is in possession of irrefutable evidence.

"There are reports from neutral individuals who were sent to investigate. It is also known that an American mission at Tsien-Ching-Sai has protested to the Japanese authorities."

Su Le Chang's letter called attention to the repeated denials on the part of Japan which followed every charge of premeditated military action in Manchuria. The note continued:

"They have denied any premeditated plan in the attack on Mukden in September, 1931.

"They have denied the attack and occupation of Chinchow in December, 1931.

"They have denied having any territorial ambitions in Manchuria, stating they would not even take the land 'as a gift,' as their late Premier Inukai said.

'DISTURBER OF PEACE'

"Yet the unfolding of events has proved that these denials are as trustworthy as Japan's profession to observe treaty obligations and pledges of honor.

"They are denying any military design in Jehol and China proper, yet information from reliable sources has given my government no little anxiety concerning peace and tranquility in Northern China.

"Does the world have to wait until the Japanese soldiers actually set foot on the soil of the Peiping and Tientsin areas in order to pronounce judgment that Japan is a disturber of the peace in the Far East? How long will the nations allow Japan to get away with lies and bad faith?"

The raid was made on the home of David Milder, where the raiders planted a burning cross on the lawn, broke in the house and attacked four persons, including Milder and his wife.

First Time In History—the World's GRAND CHAMPION STEER Comes To Pittsburgh

"All the world is appreciative of the work that the breeders and feeders of domestic animals are doing to mold a perfect model of a living animal.

"The highest reward and recognition for these expert livestockmen find their fruition each year at Chicago within the gates of the International Live Stock Exposition, the most strictly agricultural exposition in the world.

"The highest prizes awarded here are the grand championships to the best steer, the hog that most closely measures to the ideal market type, and to the fat sheep that in form and fitting most nearly approaches perfection."

The International Live Stock Exposition.

at the Thirty-third International Live-Stock Exposition in Chicago

"TO THE SURPRISE of the proud "corn belt," Texas this year produced the grand champion steer, named "Texas Special," exhibited by C. M. Largent & Sons, of Merkel, Texas. With some 6,000,000 head of Herefords and other cattle, Texas ought to win, but the corn belt does not seem to think so."

"Mr. O. T. Handle, treasurer of the stock show, exhibits "Texas Special" as proudly as any impresario showing his prima donna. He makes you see how squarely the animal is built, like a block cut from a redwood tree, short legs, flat back, beef down to the hoof. He is ecstatic, admiring the width of the animal, seen from the rear."

5 Times a Champion---a most unusual record

I—Won the Grand Championship at the South Plains Calf Show at Lubbock, Texas, in April 1932.

II—Won the "Champion" Ribbon in the Hereford Steer, Spayed or Martin Heifer, 1150 and under 1350-pound division at International Live Stock Show, Chicago, December, 1932.

IV—Won the "Champion by Weights" Ribbon—Steer or Heifer, all kinds and all classes in the 1150 and under 1350-pound competition at International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, December, 1932.

V—Won the "Grand Champion" Ribbon—Steer or Heifer, all kinds and all classes—the highest award that can go to any steer or heifer in the entire show.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2, 1932—A trim, white-faced, smooth, low set, uniformly fleshed Hereford from a Texas ranch—"Texas Special" by name—was selected as the Grand Champion steer at the Thirty-third International Live Stock Show in the Union Stock Yards at Chicago.

It is believed that this Live-stock Show was the largest ever held. From all over the world there were five thousand live animals exhibited in the enormous stockyards buildings and five thousand more in the pens outside to take part in the competition.

"Texas Special" was selected as the Grand Champion—Champion of Champions—from 750 sleek fat final contenders for the highest honor from all parts of the world.

In making the award Walter Biggar, veteran noted cattle judge from Dalbeattie, Scotland, called "Texas Special" a really great steer and "the best I have ever seen." This is the seventh time Mr. Biggar has judged at the Chicago Show.

Cattlemen and authorities on animal breeding, who watched Mr. Biggar in the final elimination contest, said that despite the unusually large number of fine animals in final competition, "Texas Special" was the outstanding animal in the show.

The victory of a Hereford marked the end of a long domination at the stock show of the Aberdeen-Angus strain.

Unusually large crowds were on hand for the final eliminations in the steer-judging event and it is believed attendance figures passed 150,000 for the show.

"Texas Special" was owned and exhibited by Largent and Sons of Merkel, Texas; weighed 1,240 pounds and was bought at the rate of $1.25 a pound, or $1,550.00 by Pfaelzer Bros., a Chicago meat concern, for the account of Donahoe's of Pittsburgh.

Including prize money and sale price "Texas Special" brought his owners the tidy cash sum of $2,225.00. Imagine buying beef—on the hoof—at $1.25 a pound. A dinner for one, built around a tenderloin steak from the Grand Champion steer, would cost about $20 at a medium price restaurant.

In a week when prime steers are selling around 7 to 8 cents a pound, the lowest prices in years, and the grand champion carlot, which also was bought by a Pittsburgh concern, selling for 15½ cents a pound, the price of $1.25 a pound on the hoof for the grand champion was considered good.

In a spirited auction, with many buyers competing, a deluge of bids opened, and mounted to $1.00 in a hurry. Although bidding tended to slow down a little as the price advanced near the final figure, no prospective buyer had the honor of holding the lead for more than a matter of a few brief seconds until the steer finally passed into the hands of Pfaelzer Bros. for the account of Donahoe's of Pittsburgh.

"Texas Special" was calved May 6, 1931, and its sire was "Superior 5th."

"Texas Special," a Texas steer, but how different from the type identified with the Lone Star State for many years, is the first animal from the largest of all cattle-raising states to win the Grand Championship in the 33 years of the International Live Stock Show at Chicago and "Texas Special" will also be the first Grand Champion that was ever bought by a Pittsburgh concern.

After being exhibited in Chicago for several days, the grand champion "Texas Special" will be shipped to the Dunlevy-Franklin Packing Co. at Pittsburgh for Donahoe's of Pittsburgh, Pa.

REAL Champions Come High!

At this Thirty-third International Live-Stock Exposition Auction, "Texas Special," the grand champion, sold for $1.25 a pound on the hoof; the cattle which, as a group, won the grand champion carlot title, sold for 15½ cents a pound on the hoof; prime steers of choice quality are selling at 8 cents a pound.

BELLEVUE BANK CASE ACTION DEMANDED

A demand for action in prosecutions of officials of closed state banks was voiced today by Park H. Martin, engineer, former Burgess of Bellevue and chairman of a depositors' committee of the closed Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue.

Martin also decried what he called "unreasonable, unwarranted and reckless" expenditures of banking department officials in the Citizens Bank and said they would be thoroughly discussed in a meeting of depositors in Bellevue Borough Hall at 8 p. m. Friday. Martin said:

"More than a year has elapsed since the closing of this institution. The case of A. D. Smith, former secretary-treasurer of the bank, accused by the Banking Department of defalcations, has been delayed, sidetracked and stalled up to this date. We want some action.

"To my knowledge, not one accused official in closed state banks in Pennsylvania has yet been tried. The people are getting tired of this mess. We are going to air the whole thing at our meeting."

Attorney George F. Taylor, Jr., in charge of the bank, replied:

"Dr. William D. Gordon, secretary of the banking, is, by the department's policy, the only person qualified to answer Mr. Martin's charges. As for the exceptions, hearing on December 14 will tell the tale."

GLASS HOUSES PREDICTED

Living in glass houses may be a jest today, but future generations may have homes of permanent bright colors in glass bricks, according to Ross J. Clemens, Des Moines, first vice president of the National Glass Distributors Association which opened its two-day annual meeting today in the William Penn Hotel.

Citing the future of all industries depends upon new uses of its products, Mr. Clemens explained:

"Glass for home construction is only a dream today. But it has possibilities. New uses are progressing and without them it is likely the distributors of flat glass would be worse off under present conditions."

10 Die, 80 Buried In German Blast

RATHENOW, Germany, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Ten workers were known to be dead and 80 were buried under debris in an explosion at the I. G. Farbin artificial silk works at Premnitz today.

A 400-pound hydrogen container blew up while workmen were putting finishing touches on an addition to the plant. The fate of the 80 inside the crumbled walls was not known.

Job Lack Blamed For Crowded Pens

HARRISBURG, Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Crowded conditions in Pennsylvania prisons were attributed today in a large measure to a 655 per cent increase in non-support cases, according to the Department of Welfare.

The department reported that 69 county prisons, with cells available for 6,642 persons, had more than 9,000 inmates.

UNPAID FEES TO BAR PUPILS

Unless nearly $10,000 in back tuition is paid by next January, 129 Mifflin Township students will be barred from Homestead High School, it was announced in an ultimatum delivered to the township School Board today.

Declaring the Homestead School Board was no longer able financially to carry the burdens of the township pupils, Samuel S. Boot, president, said:

"Homestead has been lenient with the township in awaiting payment of the tuition, but has reached the point where funds are needed."

He said Homestead had to borrow this year to carry on its own school program. No township tuition has been paid for 1932, it was said, and some of the payments demanded represents an unpaid balance carried over from 1931.

COX NEEDS 'GAS' FOR TRUCK

Father Cox is in a position to get all the coal he can haul for the needy families on his long list. He has a 5-ton truck suitable for this purpose, plenty of men to handle the coal, but he is without the cash necessary for gasoline to run the truck.

It is a 20-mile haul from St. Patrick's to the coal mine and return and the average cost for the gas for each trip is $1. Father Cox would like to put in a big supply of coal before the severe winter weather sets in and he will appreciate donations in cash for his "Keep 'Em Warm" fund. This is an unusual opportunity to do something really worthwhile for the destitute at a minimum cost. Every little bit helps.

In the meantime the subscription campaign inaugurated by the Sun-Telegraph for the Father Cox Unemployment Fund is meeting with gratifying response. Father Cox was given the first check in this new campaign three or four days ago and he says that it was one of the largest checks he has received from any source within a year or more. This money is employed to buy food for the hungry—the breadline at Old St. Patrick's and the many destitute families on his list. For every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page Father Cox gets a liberal cash commission for his unemployment fund.

BEAREN HEADS CHURCH GROUP

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Dr. Albert W. Beaven, Rochester, N. Y., a former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, today was elected president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America at its quadrennial meeting here.

Dr. Lewis Seymour Mudge, Philadelphia, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., was elected to the newly-created office of vice president.

Both elections were for the two-year terms, the council having previously revised its constitution to make its meetings biennial instead of quadrennial.

Dr. Beaven is president of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, a Baptist institution, and president of the American Home Baptist Missionary Society.

COUNTY CHIEFS RESENT BELL FINE SLASH

County Commissioners may appeal to higher courts from the order of Judge Frank P. Patterson, reducing the fine of John A. Bell from $19,000 to $5,000. Judge Patterson last month cut the fine imposed upon Bell, Carnegie banker and coal operator, when he was sentenced five years ago to pay $19,000 and spend six and a half years in jail.

The Commissioners have been informed by their special solicitor, Mortimer B. Lesher, that the order of Judge Patterson indicates that out of the $5,000 fine the county will have to pay the bill for care of the aged banker at the Allegheny General Hospital. The bill, Lesher says, will amount to about half of the $5,000.

'HAPPY MOVIE' CHARGE DENIED

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Frank Borzage, noted director, who made the book, "A Farewell to Arms," into a motion picture, replied yesterday to the assertions of the author, Ernest Hemingway, that the film version, disgressing from the text, depicted a happy ending. Borzage said:

"Hemingway hasn't seen the picture, so how does he know?"

"It is a faithful reproduction. The girl dies in the end and if that is not an unhappy ending, I don't know what one is. We did make a happy ending as an afterthought but it was never used, although exhibitors who prefer a cheerful conclusion are at liberty to obtain it.

"We used the Hemingway dialogue to a great extent and it is Hemingway all the way through. We followed the book more closely, I venture to say, than ever has been done before in Hollywood."

Niemeyer, Noted Artist, Dies at 93

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—John Henry Neiemeyer, 93, noted artist and professor-emeritus of drawing in the Yale school of fine arts, died today.

The last surviving pupil of Jean August Ingies, French master of the nineteenth century, Neiemeyer held the Street professorship in drawing at Yale for 37 years before his retirement in 1908.

REFUND SOUGHT ON ROAD JOB PAYMENT

Acting on recommendations by the law department and M. C. Conick, auditor, County Commissioners today had held up payments due R. H. Cunningham and Sons, contractors, and ordered steps taken to seek reimbursement for $23,816.38 alleged overcharges.

Reports from Conick and County Solicitors J. P. Fife and Ralph Frank, informed the Commissioners the company had asked payment of $16,591 for work on the south approach to the West End-North Side Bridge. The Commissioners decided to hold up the money until after the investigation of the Moss Side boulevard contract.

The report also said further information has been obtained pertaining to bills rendered the county by the Cunningham company for the Moss Side contract. The investigation shows, it said, that the company was paid for contract work not performed and for materials not furnished.

The Commissioners were informed they are entitled to reimbursement of the $23,816.38 with interest from February 4, 1931.

The Cunningham company yesterday entered the low bid on work to reduce traffic congestion at the north end of the Liberty tubes by cutting down the traffic circle.

Three Convicted As Counterfeiters

Lewis J. Trenga and Philip Chiccorella, of Pittsburgh, and Rocco Di Bianco, of New Haven, Conn., were convicted yesterday in Federal Court of passing a counterfeit $10 bill and possessing 37 others. They were arrested six weeks ago in Sharpsburg by police after they attempted to pass a fake bill in a butcher shop.

Nurse in Auto Shot By Former Suitor

READING, Pa., Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Mary Rogers, 23, nurse, was confined today in a hospital here, suffering from five bullet wounds, said to have been inflicted by a young man at Wernersville. Physicians said her condition was not serious.

Miss Rogers, an attractive brunette, and an attendant at the state hospital, said Ted Mattes, of Wernersville, fired the shots as she sat in her automobile outside a garage. Mattes, she said, was a former suitor.

2 Girls, 2 Men Hurt As Auto Overturns

HOOVER SENDS CUT BUDGET TO CONGRESS

culated would bring in another $137,000,000—amounting to almost a half billion in new revenue.

This new revenue, with the $580,000,000 estimated reduction in expenditures, would be calculated to bring the Treasury somewhere near out of the yawning chasm in which it has been floundering since the depression.

Mr. Hoover proposed to attain this $580,000,000 reduction in expenditures in various ways.

Reducing veterans' allowances by $127,000,000.

Authorizing no new federal construction at this time.

Continuing the administrative economy measures adopted last session.

Neither in his annual message yesterday, nor in his budget message today, did the President mention prohibition or beer, and the twin omissions lent some credence to the theory that he would veto a beer bill if the lame-duck session passes it. In any event, beer revenue did not enter the President's picture of federal finances.

DRY ENFORCEMENT

At the same time, he recommended appropriating $9,599,948 for enforcing prohibition during the next fiscal year, exclusive of Coast Guard enforcement activities. The Coast Guard has $26,664,654 in the budget, at least part of which is devoted to catching rum-runners.

It is quite probable there will be a fight on this $9,000,000 item when the budget gets to the floors of Congress, for some members favor killing prohibition outright by refusing appropriations for its enforcement.

The President warned Congress of financial disaster unless prompt action is taken to bring the government's income up to somewhere near its out-go. Even with the new revenues and the drastic retrenchment, he said, the public debt will be greatly increased this year. He declared:

"Such a situation cannot be continued without disaster to federal finances. The recommendations herein presented to Congress for further drastic reductions in expenditures and increased revenues will only serve to prevent a further increase in the public debt in the fiscal year 1934 only if Congress will refrain from placing additional burdens upon the federal Treasury.

"I cannot too strongly urge that every effort be made to limit expenditures and avoid additional obligations not only in the interest of the already heavily burdened taxpayer, but in the interest of the very integrity of the finances of the federal government."

ECONOMIES URGED

Administrative economies recommended to be continued would include: Furlough and pay reductions, suspension of automatic promotion in federal service; reductions in retired pay, travel allowance, overtime pay, shifting of employes, reduction in vocational education appropriations and reduction of fees for jurors and witnesses, etc.

As for further government building, the President reported the federal program already authorized is proceeding satisfactorily. He said:

"No provision is made for additional projects in the budget, and I do not deem further building at this time in the public interest."

For national defense, Mr. Hoover recommended $586,447,000, a reduction of $46,019,000 over the current year.

The war department was allotted $276,863,201, providing for 12,000 officers and 118,000 enlisted men.

New naval construction was estimated at $38,845,000.

Virtually every department of the government will have less money to spend next fiscal year than it had this year. The reductions ranged all the way from $131,000 for the Labor Department to $201,000,000 for Agriculture.

Most of this large amount is accounted for by discontinuance of road aid to the states, as the Agriculture Department administers the funds.

Amy Johnson Seeks To Beat Own Marks

CAPE TOWN, S. A., Dec. 7.—(AP.) — Amy Johnson, famous British aviatrix, announced she would take off from here at 7 a. m. next Sunday in an attempt to fly to England in less than 4 days, 6 hours and 55 minutes, the record she established November 18, when she completed her England-to-the-Cape flight. That flight bettered the record set last spring by her husband, Capt. J. A. Mollison.

U. S. TO WORK PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The large number of prisoners which the federal government now maintains in idleness will soon be put to work under a plan of the Bureau of Prisons.

Sanford Bates, director, in his annual report today, said that as soon as a few remaining details were worked out, federal prisoners would be employed on various governmental projects for which funds were not available.

Specific projects upon which the use of such labor has been studied, Bates said, include reduction of fire hazards in national forests, construction of roads and trails, improvement of timber stands and "other work which would not be economically possible under present conditions of the Treasury."

Starts 2-Year Trip In 18-Foot Boat

SAN PEDRO, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Braving the seas alone in an 18-foot roofed-over metallic lifeboat with a sail attached, Robert B. Vale, Jr., son of a Philadelphia editor, shoved off yesterday on a leisurely two-year cruise around South America to Philadelphia.

MILLS URGES EXCISE TAX REPEAL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Repeal of unproductive excise taxes, enactment of a 2¼ per cent manufacturers' sales tax and banking reforms were proposed to Congress today by Secretary of the Treasury Mills.

The deficit for 1933 was estimated at $1,644,631,000 and for 1934 $1,025,631,000 on the basis of one set of budget figures presented to Congress by the President and $841,262,000 on the supplementary budget.

PLEA FOR ECONOMY

Mills made a plea for drastic curtailment of expenditures, declaring that "it is not only unwise but impossible to bridge the gap in the budget entirely by increased taxation."

The Secretary said:

"In view of the misunderstanding as evidenced in the congressional debates of last winter, I must emphasize that I am not recommending a general sales or turnover tax, with the inevitable pyramiding of the tax, but a manufacturers' excise tax, imposed at one point only."

Repeal of excise taxes which experience demonstrated were relatively unproductive and give rise to serious administrative difficulties was advocated. In another section of the report Mills had referred to the tax of brewers' wort and checks as a disappointment. Evasion of the wort tax was suspected and the Treasury has started an investigation.

Mills' report indicated no hope of a completely balanced budget before the fiscal year 1935. He urged that the budget, with the exception of debt retirement, should be balanced in 1934.

Declaring that the developments of the last decade have uncovered "unmistakable defects" in the American banking structure, Mills recommended legislation to authorize national banks to establish branches in trade areas.

Mills visioned a banking system which "will not only function adequately and safely in periods of fair weather, but will be able to withstand the stress of even unusual storms."

Fearing the use of 3, 3½ and 3⅝ per cent government bonds as backing for national bank notes, as authorized for a three-year period beginning July 22, 1932, "would seriously interfere with the Federal Reserve System's contact with the market and ability to influence credit conditions," in normal times, Mills recommended that there be no extension of this privilege.

Aside from a review of the foreign debt situation, Mills made no comment or recommendations on that subject. Nor did he mention the possibility of a beer bill.

HIGHER FARM PRICES URGED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Congressional action to increase the income of the American farmer by elevating the general level of agricultural prices to a par with other commodities was advocated today by the Farm Board.

This multi-pronged problem was assigned to Congress in a special report on legislative recommendations which said the board's stabilization operations were powerless to achieve this end.

No hint as to the board's ideals on the form of such legislation was given except that the process should "pay the costs, if any, on a continuous and self-sustaining basis" and "provide an effective system for regulating acreage or quantities sold, or both."

"WE are all anxious for the return of better times. But I for one do not believe that better times will be brought back just by talking . . . or by merely waiting. Someone must start something . . . and with that idea we introduced the Plymouth Six.

"We made it a completely new car. We spent $9,000,000 on tools, equipment and research. We have committed ourselves already to $42,000,000 worth of raw materials.

"We did this because we were convinced that there are many people who can buy new cars now . . . and would if offered an outstanding value. And every new car sold . . . whether a Plymouth or some other make . . . puts more men to work.

"Look at the new Plymouth. Look at all three low-priced cars. And I sincerely believe your next car will be a Floating Power Plymouth Six."

Fannie Hurst's popular short story, "God Made Little Apples," is offered by a company of Broadway players including Charles Webster, Helene Dumas, Peggy Allenby and John McGovern over KDKA at 7:30 as tonight's Five Star Theater feature. Program Pointers

A one-hour festival concert is presented by the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, the Mendelssohn Glee Club and a distinguished group of artists in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the MacDowell Colony and the seventieth anniversary of the birth of Edward MacDowell, celebrated American composer, over WCAE, beginning at 9 o'clock tonight. Ruth Draper, Colin O'More, Paul Kochanski, Albert Stoessel, Harry Glantz, Ernest Schelling and John Erskine are among the famed personalities who participate in the program.

Barbara Maurel, Don Clark, Morton Downey, Tony Wons, Edwin C. Hill and Do, Re, Mi are starred with Freddie Rich's Orchestra on the second of the new series of Columbia Radio Revues over WJAS at 10:30 tonight.

Canada's crack 48th Highlanders Band, of Toronto, pays tribute to Mary Stuart, the Queen of Scots, with a special program in memory of her birth in 1542, over KDKA at 10:30 p. m.

During the war, Nick Dawson, who plays Jim Norman in "The Magic Voice," was wounded and spent his days of convalescence writing war poems. Although a number of them were published and one, "Along With the Fighting Nineteenth," reprinted as one of the four poems most interpretive of the folly and futility of the war, he's never written a line of poetry since.

Listening In

Lanny and Mary Lou Two Other Persons When They Talk

About Lanny and Mary Lou, the romantic young couple on the "Show Boat" program: When they sing, Lanny is Lanny Ross in person and Mary Lou is Audrey Marsh . . . but when they speak, Lanny is Allyn Joslyn and Mary Lou is Rosaline Greene . . . Bert Lahr comes to the microphone tomorrow night as Rudy Vallee's guest . . . Although he is one of the most popular character actors on the air, Arthur Allen is seldom seen outside of the studios. When in town, he lives alone, has an unlisted telephone number and rarely goes out.

Pat Binford, m. c. on the Corn Cob Pipe Club programs, says that the routine of that radio production depends entirely on the attitude of the audience. If the visitors are slow in warming up, he is likely to change the sequence of selections, putting all of the peppier numbers first. If, on the other hand, they are already jovial and somewhat noisy, he puts on the talking specialties first to quiet them down. The entertainers themselves never know when they're going to be called.

Do, Re and Mi had their most embarrassing moment the other day. They found a basket of fruit outside the door of their dressing room at a theater where they're currently appearing, concluded it was a gift and proceeded to devour the contents . . . only to be informed presently that the fruit constituted one of the props for another act.

That Home Circle contest for the best statements on "How Would You Improve Advertising Over the Radio?" reveals that the majority of listeners throughout the country are not offended by commercial announcements—on the contrary, the dialers' replies show a definite trend to have the commercials a part of the program as much as possible. The ones most disliked are those that attempt to force the listeners by high pressure selling to buy a product.

The Russian Symphonic Choir, directed by Basil Kibalchich, with Max Pantalieff, bass-baritone, as soloist, is featured during the NBC Artists Service broadcast over WCAE at 10:30.

It's Boxing Night For Seals

Bobby Leitham, Canadian bantamweight champion, who fights Jimmy Thomas at the Arena Friday night, and Sam Gibbs, his manager, are interviewed by Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, as a highlight of the Trained Seals' program on WCAE at 7 o'clock tonight.

A half-hour program for the children is presented on WCAE today from 4:45 to 5:15.

Speaking from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Ted Kaye, pinch-hitting for his brother, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, who is ill, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS listeners at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

Bunyan Life Story Dramatized Here

The story of John Bunyan, who wrote "Pilgrim's Progress" during his long imprisonment in Bedford Gaol, is told during the "Sheer Romance" presentation over an NBC-WJZ network from the studios of KDKA at 6:30 tonight.

Drowning Mystery In 'Crime Club'

"The Murder Mark," a mystery story concerning the drowning of a millionaire in his outdoor swimming pool during a party at his home, is the "Crime Club" offering on WJAS at 9:30.

WASH OUT YOUR K-I-D-N-E-Y-S— SLEEP FINE

No More Getting Up Nights

So you feel achy all over, miserable and blue? Your head feels "crowded" your nerves quiver, you have pin-and-needle cramps—your appetite has gone and you feel weak as a cat. Don't fill your stomach with tonics or laxatives or rheumatism remedies. How can they help if it is your kidneys.

The job of the kidneys is to strain the uric acid and other poisons out of your blood. They purify your blood, that's it. Now you must not let these acids stay in the kidneys or they'll get back in the blood and poison your whole body. That's why your kidneys must pass 3 pints of "water" a day. Let them fail and you know it. Your appetite goes back on you, so does your pep, your sleep, and your nerves—your back hurts, your ankles and feet may swell up and you feel crabby and sick.

Now see what a wonderful change takes place after you start on Foley Pills. Kidney action increases at once. Out go those acids. Burning stops. Sleep is sounder, and none of this getting-up business. You feel like "somebody."

Your druggist has Foley Pills. Sells a lot of them, because most people know how good they are. Do'n't cost much either—but they certainly do a grand job. If they don't, your money back any time you want it. ©1932

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

Today is the third round of the battle of the century between Knockout Influenza and Battling Louis—the Globe Trotter. The first round was decisively in Knockout's favor when he smacked my temperature up to 102. But there was a startled look in his eyes when I lopped that temperature down to 99 in a fast breath-taking second round. Just between ourselves and the lamp-post I think, as we go into round three, that it won't be long before I drop him for the count.

* * *

Melvin Good questions the report that Mrs. Roosevelt, mother of Franklin D. Roosevelt, was the only woman since Mary Washington to see her son become president. He states that Mrs. Garfield, mother of President James Garfield, attended his funeral in Cleveland after his assassination. Furthermore, Mrs. McKinley died while her son was in the White House. Nice work Melvin — Winchell would surely have given you an orchid. But can you or any other Globe Trotters let us know about the other mothers besides the two mentioned, who saw their sons become President?

* * *

Eleven-year-old Alma Nicholas reaches the height of something or other. She requests me to sing. No, Alma, my vocal abilities do not cover that scope.

Albert Payson Terhune, noted dog fancier, would certainly take off his hat to this wire-haired terrier, Imp, who has two different barks, one for ordinary circumstances, and one for fires. His owner, Ruth Keller, states that he doesn't wait for the home to burn down, but responds as soon as the clinkers shoot out of the grate to the carpets.

* * *

A hat cleaner by the name of John cautions me to "lay off" the fog. Business has never been so good, he says. It's an ill wind, etc., etc.

* * *

A patient of the Old Pittsburgh Free Dispensary wishes to know why it is not in operation today. This building was taken over by the University of Pittsburgh some years ago and run by them until the completion of the Falk Clinic. At that time, the staff of the dispensary and all the cases they had on record were transferred to the clinic. All the new cases from the district served by the dispensary are now handled by the Allegheny General Hospital. Thanks to Harry Stanley, director of publicity of the hospitals in Pennsylvania, for this information.

* * *

Do you know that the first month of the New Year has a Friday the 13th? Don't go away angry.

* * *

Yes, as the announcer indicates, the news comes directly from the fifth floor of the Sun-Telegraph Building. Two microphones attached to two separate lines take the twin broadcast to WCAE and WJAS. A ring comes from WCAE when the opening announcement is about to be made. Immediately I ring WJAS, signaling them to start, and then, after muttering a short prayer that both announcers are speaking at the same speed, wait 30 seconds, trip over a chair and displaying startling originality, say:

"Good afternoon, Ladies and Gentlemen. Well, isn't this a fine day?"

Ruth Etting Sings 'Lonesome, Sorry'

Ruth Etting's versions of "Lonesome and Sorry" and "I'll Never Have to Dream Again" and Nat Shilkret's interpretation of Hoaghy Carmichael's "Bolero" are WJAS highlights at 10 tonight.

Many Difficulties Follow Secret Marriages

Would you show the boy friend the door if he lost his job?

Even if you wore his ring, and said you loved him?

Juliet did. And Hal, in his bitterness, wondered if all girls were like that.

Here's Anne, with a fighting answer.

Do you agree with it? And what's your opinion of the rest of her letter? Shall she, or shan't she? Would you, or wouldn't you?

Dear Sally:

I've been reading your column for quite a while, and I have often felt like answering some of the letters published there, but nothing ever struck me quite so hard as the letter from Hal, telling how his girl showed him the door when he had a little hard luck.

I'd like to answer it, because I feel that I can say quite a lot on the subject. Girls like that make me so mad! And I want to assure Hal that we're not all like that.

I certainly think that girl he was engaged to was nothing but a cheap, lazy, good-for-nothing idiot. I could probably think up even more pet names for her, if I tried.

Naturally, he is hurt. He probably loves the girl. But if he's wise, he'll let his love turn to contempt. Because I'd be willing to bet money that he could get out right now and find some nice girl who would take him as is, without any job. I don't mean marry him. You can't get married unless you have some way to eat. But I do mean a girl who would go with him, and encourage him, and keep his spirits up so he can find another job.

FRIEND LOST JOB

I have gone with a young man myself for a year and a half. He lost his job last October. We planned to get married in the fall, and then that happened. But I most certainly didn't give him up on that account. We are still hanging on and hoping for things to break our way.

I have a good job, which keeps my spirits up, but it is all I can do to keep him from being blue and discouraged. I don't always succeed at it. Sometimes I think I can't bear the uncertainty—going on this way, and not knowing where it will all end—but giving him up has never entered my mind.

Lately we have been planning a secret marriage. It's not that we're afraid our love won't last, but we want to belong to each other. If we were married, don't you think knowing that we really belonged to each other would keep our spirits up, and help us over a lot of the difficulties? It is not as if we were kids and didn't know our own minds. I will be 25 in a short time.

His parents do not object, and neither do mine. Do you think we are foolish, or wise, to plan things that way? I would like to have your opinion. That is really why I am telling all this to you. ANNE.

MARRY OPENLY

You're a great girl for sticking like that, Anne. And I'm sure your story will make Hal take heart and realize that he just picked the wrong girl, and that some day he'll find the right one who'll stick by him.

And now how about that secret marriage? Well, if you want to get married, that's up to you, my dear. You're old enough to know what you're doing—and to face things as is. If you think you'd be happier married and really belonging to each other, then go ahead.

But why keep it a secret? If you marry at all, why not come right out with it? A secret marriage may sound romantic, but it is a dangerous thing to seem free when you're not free. Nor is it a happy thing to dodge around corners to be together, and perhaps start people wondering and gossiping about it.

If you're getting married at all, I'd advise you to get married in the open.

What's your opinion, Folks?

One's Own Conscience Offers Best Counsel, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

There are matters in life about which no one can advise another.

It is entirely up to the person concerned. No counsel will be half so good as thinking things out alone.

Learn to seek your own counsel at such times. Look into your own heart, and be sure that you are not influenced from any direction.

Be sure that you are considering your own best interests. Be cautious even of the persuasion of another who may be concerned, and that you are not making your decision in their favor rather than your own.

And above all, don't be a self-swindler, disregarding your own conscience, which is usually the best guide, in deciding distinctions between right or wrong.

Be true to yourself.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Thrill of a Grand Slam

With vastly increased premiums for the bidding and making of Grand Slams, it is not at all strange that players who, before the adoption of the new laws, never bid a Grand Slam, now venture beyond the realm of higher mathematics, and make speculative bids which require the utmost precision in the play to realize. In the old days it was considered to be very bad bidding to find yourself embarked on a Grand Slam contract, the success of which depended upon a finesse or a squeeze.

An interesting example of Grand Slam bidding occurred recently at Crockford's Club, New York, on the hand below:

South—Dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♠	4 ♠ (1)
6 ♡ (2)	Pass	7 ♡ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

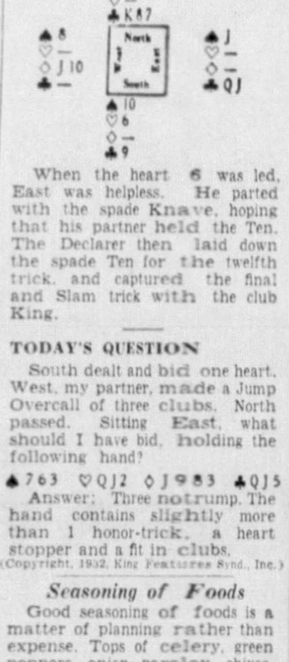
1—Apparently an overbid, although, as a matter of fact, East and West probably would be defeated only a single trick at four spades.

2—This also is an overbid. Five hearts probably would be safer.

3—In view of South's immediate Jump to Slam, North is justified in bidding a Grand Slam.

West's Opening lead was the spade King, which was ruffed with the deuce of trumps in Dummy. South could see that there were two methods of playing the hand to take all the tricks. The first was to ruff the spades before exhausting trumps, and the second to exhaust trumps and discard the losing spades on Dummy's long clubs. The latter method appeared safer to the Declarer, since East's four-spade bid was suggestive of a freakish distribution. Accordingly two rounds of trumps were taken, followed by the Ace of clubs from Dummy, but when West failed to follow suit, the Declarer regretted that he had not adopted the other method of playing the hand. A club could be established for a discard, but by that time the Dummy would be void of entries.

There then remained the squeeze. This could only be effective if East could be squeezed between two suits—clubs and spades. West was marked with the spade Ace, both on the bidding and on the Opening lead. However, if East held the spade Knave everything would be well. The closed hand was re-entered with the lead of a diamond, and the Queen of spades laid down. Perforce West must cover. This was ruffed with the 4 of trumps, and then the King of diamonds was followed with a small diamond. Now South continued to lead his remaining trumps. The position at the eleventh trick was:



When the heart 6 was led, East was helpless. He parted with the spade Knave, hoping that his partner held the Ten. The Declarer then laid down the spade Ten for the twelfth trick, and captured the final and Slam trick with the club King.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South dealt and bid one heart. West, my partner, made a Jump Overcall of three clubs. North passed. Sitting East, what should I have bid, holding the following hand?

♠ 7 6 3 ♡ Q J 2 ◇ J 9 8 3 ♣ Q J 5

Answer: Three notrump. The hand contains slightly more than 1 honor-trick, a heart stopper and a fit in clubs.

Seasoning of Foods

Good seasoning of foods is a matter of planning rather than expense. Tops of celery, green peppers, onion, parsley, chives, bay leaves, meat sauces, catsup and pickle relishes and horseradish provide a delightful variety of flavors.

Correct Manners

Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I am to be married soon and it is impossible for me to buy printed invitations. It is to be an informal wedding at home. Could I buy plain white paper and write the invitations myself? I thought of writing notes as follows:

Dear Mary and Jack:

George and I will be married on (blank date) at the home of (blank) at two o'clock. We would like to have you present at the wedding.

Very truly yours,
Edith.

Would that be all right?

2—Does the bridesmaid take the bride's bouquet when the groom puts the ring on her finger?

3—There will be about one hundred guests. Would sandwiches, cake, coffee and candy be enough to serve?

4—I am going to wear a white afternoon dress. Should I wear a hat? E.

1—For an informal wedding at home it is thoroughly appropriate and correct to have the invitations written. It is always best form for the hostess of the occasion, the mother of the bride-to-be, to write these invitations. Like this:

Dear Mary:

Edith and George are to be married at our home, on Tuesday, the first of December, at two o'clock, and we all very much want to have you and Jack with us. You will come . . . won't you?

Dearest love to you both,
Cordially,

2—Yes.

3—Yes.

4—Wear a hat or not, as you wish. If you feel that a hat completes the harmony of your costume . . . and it usually does, I think . . . wear a hat.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Directs the Hunt for Clues

I fairly held my breath as the car, with Ronald at the wheel, crawled slowly up the road that Lillian had directed him to take, but I kept my eyes fixed upon my side of the road, knowing that Lillian and Mary also were watching intently—for what? Neither Mary nor I knew, but when we reached the two-mile limit which Lillian had set and alighted from the car, she spoke rapidly, almost breathlessly while Ronald was turning the car.

"If this is the road the kidnaper took," she said, and I noticed that her throat contracted at the dread word, "Marion would suspect something was wrong as soon as they turned into it and would set her wits to work to leave some trace of their journey without the man being aware of her doing so. I hope she had presence of mind enough not to voice her suspicions before she blazed her trail.

"Now we must keep our eyes open for the tiniest things, blown among these bushes, or ground into the dust of the road. A handkerchief, a brooch, a torn piece of scarf or dress, a piece of paper with something scrawled on it, anything the girls may have worn or have had in their purses—these are the things for which we must look."

I had known, really, what she meant to tell us, but putting it into words seemed to bring concretely before me the sinister problem we were facing. Somewhere in these hills Lillian believed that her daughter and Caroline were being held prisoners. We were searching for any pitiful little clues that the ingenuity of two horribly frightened girls might have fashioned.

I had to scourge my courage to keep from screaming out my terror. I saw Mary shaking as with an ague as she began to search the underbrush, and knew that she shared my hysteria.

But the sight of Lillian, white-lipped, but calm, beginning a systematic search of one side of the road as coolly as if she were looking for huckleberries, shamed me into similar control and I managed to whisper a word of encouragement to Mary.

"Steady, dear! Look at Aunt Lillian!"

My husband's winsome young niece nodded.

"I'll buck up," she whispered, and we proceeded with our search; but when we had again reached the heavily wooded corner where the winding road began, we looked at each other with the realization that our labors ended in futility.

I looked at Lillian with furtive dismay. For myself, I felt as if I were up to my armpits in quicksand, but she betrayed no sign of disappointment. From the depth of her spirit she had found abnormal strength and composure with which to meet this threatened tragedy.

"There are three things we must consider," she said when Ronald had helped her into the car and we were on our way back to the village. "First, they may not have taken this road; second, if they did, we may not have gone far enough upon it; third, the girls may not have had any opportunity to throw out anything. But we will come back again after we have waited a reasonable time for a message, once that white flag has gone up. There may even be—"

She paused abruptly and I saw that she did not mean to finish what she had begun. Instead, she struck her right fist into the palm of her other hand and said, with her first hint of emotion:

"I will walk every road in this county before I give up hope."

The next instant she was by far the most composed person in the car, and when, just before entering the hotel, we met Harry Underwood and learned that his search and that of Hugh Grantland had been as futile as our own, she, unbelievably, was the one who heartened her husband with her patent belief that somewhere along one of the mountain roads the girls had managed to leave clues as to their course.

"Madge, I think you would better take a taxi back to the school," she said, her mind evidently overseeing every slightest detail of our problem. "The girls would recognize Ronald."

"Better still, I'll walk," I told her. "It's only a short distance. What do you want of me, once I get there?"

"Simply wait for developments," she said, keeping her voice almost to a whisper. "There is nothing to do now except wait for some message after the white flag goes up. You would better lie down and rest, even if you do not sleep. I'm going to stretch out until I hear from you.

"And don't telephone, unless you think an emergency demands it. Come here instead and tell us what the developments are. Oh! Look, Madge! Look up! Dicky's on the job—and how!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Malta and Undulant Fever Are Identical

Several of my readers have written for information about Malta fever. Others have asked about undulant fever. These are merely two names given to one and the same disease.

Dr. Copeland

This disease is one which affects goats and other animals. But it is transmitted to man, either by direct contact with affected animal, or by the drinking of contaminated milk.

At one time this ailment was believed to be confined to the territory along the Mediterranean coast. For this reason it is often referred to as "Mediterranean fever." Likewise, it is found along the Rio Grande River and in the midwestern section of the United States.

Malta fever is often vague and confusing in its symptoms. It is sometimes mistaken for grippe. In certain cases it closely resembles typhoid fever.

At the beginning there is headache, accompanied by pains in the bones and joints. Then there come profuse sweating, constipation and an irregular fever. The temperature rises in the afternoon and the fever may persist for a week or 10 days.

Very likely there will be a period of good health and the patient feels entirely well. But in the chronic form there are relapses, on and off for several months. Though the disease is not a serious one, it may last for a long period, as I have said, and interfere with the general health and nutrition of the patient.

Every effort should be made to prevent the occurrence of this disease. Since recent investigations have revealed contaminated milk to be the most common source of infection, it can be guarded against. Proper tests of goats and cows supplying milk to the general public must be made and rules for dealing with such animals enforced. Infected cattle should be isolated and receive the necessary medical attention.

Fortunately the germ that produces undulant fever is quickly destroyed by heat. It is known that the bacillus of undulant fever is killed when exposed to a temperature of 142 degrees Fahrenheit for 20 minutes. This is the degree of heat used when milk is pasteurized. To pasteurize milk it is kept at this temperature for 30 minutes and then cooled. No cases of undulant fever have been reported in any household where pasteurized milk is used.

It is always a good plan to know that the milk you and your family drink comes from a reliable source. Make sure that the dairies that supply your milk are carefully inspected. Milk which is pure to begin with and quickly transported under proper refrigeration and sanitary precautions is a safe milk. This is your protection against undulant fever, and other infectious diseases.

If you live in a community where pasteurized milk cannot be obtained, avoid using raw milk for beverage purposes. It is wise to heat all raw milk to boiling and then quickly cool it.

ABORT that Cold

(with lemon juice)

Sometimes you get colds that just hang on for days. That is because the remedy used does not drive the cold symptoms from the system. Try cold abortion and you'll find those stubborn colds broken up and gone within a few hours. To abort a cold, squeeze two full-sized lemons in a glass of very hot water, to be taken preferably at bedtime. Two hours before, start taking a tablet of Pape's cold compound each hour. After the third tablet take the lemon juice and hot water without sugar, and go to bed, well-covered. Sound sleep will follow, and the cold will be aborted by morning. The lemon juice treatment never fails, but you must have the cold compound to clear the head, dry the nasal passages, and allay any fever. Any druggist has Pape's cold compound; it is perfectly safe, and a tablet will check a cold at any time.

HINTS TO SOLVE ARMY CIPHER

Cipher No. 20

"Infantry Message"

BETVG IEBTU PRNEE
IMDAE YOIHT NOUTR
TAKBD OJCIEANDUS POTED
DMEIT LTWTS ADONE
ATCAC

A "rail fence" cipher. See article for additional hints. How long did it take you to solve? Write to the Cipher Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Watch for a new one tomorrow.

Too bad.

It is so easy—when you know how.

Here are some more hints—in the event you need them. Don't read them, unless you're stumped.

Cipher No. 20 is a transposition affair of the type known as the "rail fence cipher." It was first generally used by Union troops during the Civil War. Because of its extreme simplicity, it is still popular among United States infantry officers, and was often used during the war for emergency messages where no great harm would be done if the message should be deciphered later.

METHOD FOR SOLUTION: This cipher will be recognized as a transposition cipher by the fact that the letters ETOANI, which are the most frequent group in ordinary English are also frequent here, and because the letters JKQXZ, which occur less than 2 per cent of the total in ordinary English, are absent here except for one J or 1.4 per cent.

Now write out the message in two lines, with a space between word-groups, the first 35 letters in the top lines, the remaining 35 letters in the bottom line.

At the end of the top line, you will see the letters B and D, and at the end of the bottom line, the letters A and C. Remember that in spacing the message into five-letter word-groups it is often necessary to fill in blanks at the end.

The solution will be published tomorrow, together with another to worry about.

$3,000 ADDED TO SEAL FUND

Additional returns on Christmas seals amounting to $3,000 have brought the total receipts on the seal sale which began on November 25, up to $10,000, officials of the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh, announced today.

This leaves the league $90,000 short of its goal of $100,000, the sum needed to effectively carry on the work of tuberculosis prevention, health education and the hospitalization of victims of the disease, through 1933. There are only 16 days, including today, remaining to raise the necessary amount.

Titled Actor Tardy in Debut

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 7.—It will be "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" in which Sir Guy Standing finally makes a Hollywood debut that was to have taken place 18 years ago.

Motion pictures were silent when the distinguished English actor first put his signature on a Paramount contract in 1914. Al Kaufman signed him and then allowed the actor a month to take a vacation cruise in a small yacht along the Atlantic Coast.

But, like so many men, Guy Standing shortly was to have his life disrupted by a great war. When he returned to port, it was to discover that England had been in the struggle for two days. As soon as he heard the news, the actor informed Paramount that the contract was off—that he must return.

Sir Guy

Return he did, and before it was all over he rose to the rank of commander in the British navy, and later he was given a title.

Better known to Broadway than he is out here, Sir Guy nevertheless won the acclaim of local playgoers for his performance with Jane Cowl in "The Road to Rome."

In his first film, he will work with such Hollywood celebrities as Frederic March, Richard Arlen and Gary Cooper. The picture, featuring very few feminine characters, is aimed to be a second "Beau Geste."

One of the better retorts of the week was made by Gus McCarthy when he brought Joe Sherman a silver golf trophy two months after the tournament in which it was won.

"Well, you took your own time," said Joe.

"What are you kicking about," flipped McCarthy. "You're not only getting a cup but an antique."

Little Sidney Fox wants to stay in New York and go on the stage. Which leaves John Negulesco very disconsolate . . . Jeanette Loff, on the other hand, tells me she will make her permanent home in Hollywood . . . Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles' famous woman evangelist, went out to Universal the other day and asked to see the "Destination Unknown" company at work. The film stars stared as frankly at her as the picture fans stare at them at premieres. . . Rochelle Hudson is no longer at RKO. She has a new heart interest, too.

Sidney Fox

The other sundown, George O'Brien bet the location troupe he could hitch-hike all the way into Los Angeles. Two hours later, they had to send a studio car to pick him up. He had barely reached the half-way mark . . . Helen Twelvetrees and Frank Woody will arrive December 24 so the baby can spend his first Christmas in Hollywood . . . Following an example which Ruth Chatterton once set, Helen Vinson is living in her dressing room at Warner Brothers. She has a three-room suite. The only disadvantage is that the tennis courts are right by her windows. Some of the net sharks arrive as early as 5:30 in the morning to start their game.

Helen Vinson

Gary Cooper, who is going quite social these days, was a week-end guest at the Robert Hays Smith home in Burlingame. The Countess Frasso and Elsa Maxwell were along, too . . . Sitting on the bench with Coach Jimmie Phelan, Norman McLeod saw his old school team, Washington, give the University of California at Los Angeles a drubbing last Saturday. Norman used to play football up north.

Stars to Act Old Roles

In "Hot Pepper," just placed in production at the Fox Studios, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe once more assume the characters they made famous in "What Price Glory" and "The Cock Eyed World," namely Capt. Flagg and Sergt. Quirt. This time Lupe Velez is the feminine cause of their many heart throbs and headaches. El Brendel is also featured, with Lillian Bond and Gloria Roy among the film's female players.

"Hot Pepper" is an original story by Dudley Nichols, with additional dialogue by Barry Connors and Philip Klein. John Blystone is directing.

Ruggles and Norton To Team Again

Charlie Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton, who shared comedy honors in Ernst Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise," will be teamed again in Maurice Chevalier's forthcoming picture. Ruggles, who is now in the East on a brief vacation after finishing his role in "Madame Butterfly," returns within a few days to appear in "Murder at the Zoo," which will precede the filming of "The Way to Love," the screen play for which is being prepared by Nunnally Johnson and Gilbert Pratt.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Abbey Theater, Dublin, home stage of the Irish Players, coming next week to the Nixon in a repertoire of modern Irish plays, is a subsidized theater, perhaps the only one in any republic in the world, and is supported by the Free State government. It was originally called the Irish Literary Theater, which was a natural outgrowth of an activity that came to be known as the Irish Literary Movement. The purpose originally was to revive Gaelic and folk literature of Ireland and it had early advocates in prominent Irish men of letters of the time, including William Butler Yeats. Lady Gregory, through her friendship with Yeats, became interested, and she soon was devoting much of her attention to the theater that was developing. Well-versed in the Anglo-Irish idiom, she was much assistance to Yeats. She is credited with being one of the founders of the Abbey, which now is known throughout the world, not only for its acting company, but because of the literary names associated with it. These include not only Lady Gregory and Mr. Yeats but also those of John M. Synge, St. John Ervine, Sean O'Casey, Lennox Robinson, George Shiels and others. The opening play, Monday night, will be a comedy, "The New Gossoon," which will be repeated Saturday afternoon. In the company are F. J. McCormick, Eileen Crowe, Barry Fitzgerald, Maureen Delaney, Michael J. Dolan, May Craig, Denis O'Dea, Kate Curling, U. Wright, Ria Mooney, Joan Sullivan, P. J. Carolan and Arthur Shields. The box office sale of seats will begin tomorrow.

It is said that when the theater gets into the blood nothing can be done about it. Must be so, for here's this handsome young leading man in the Pitt, Alden Chase, who goes right along rehearsing and acting, day after day, when he might be teaching bridge. Cups by the dozen attest his winning ways in the game and proclaim him to be a man who seldom, if ever, trumps his partner's ace or muffs a finesse. Of course, Mr. Chase, who was a member of the team that won the Northern New York bridge championship this very year, really has taught the game, too, but he ditched his class when the call came to act here. So his sister took on his students in his home town, Englewood, N. J., when he joined the Edwin Vail troupe, now the George Sharp Players. Alden is playing the devil, instead of bridge, this week, and next week he will be an associate of "Naughty Cinderella," which will bring Jean May back to the Pitt as leading woman.

Following the engagement of the Irish Players in the Nixon, it is likely that house will be dark for a week—the week before Christmas, which has such a reputation for being a hoodoo period that traveling companies usually spend it by resting. For the week following that, however, Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, announces Irving Berlin's and Moss Hart's musical revue, "Face the Music," with a cast headed by Mary Boland.

Broadways Of the World

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

EXCELSIOR HOTEL, ROME, ITALY—This being the kind of stuff it is, I must admit to you right here and now that I stepped from bed this morning with an express purpose in mind. The fact that I haven't written a sob story in some time has been worrying me ever since I thought of it yesterday. And I decided that today was the day to do it.

I stumbled into my clothes, put on a black tie in honor of the occasion and went forth in search of my story. Where and how I might find it, I had no idea. Inasmuch as I hadn't worried in years, however, was this a time to start? No. It's always been my theory that, if you walk far enough, you always fall into a story. A story, that is, or a coal-hole.

I walked up this street and down another—you can't expect me to spell them when I can't even pronounce them—and finally came upon a flower market. This, I felt, was a good spot to have a halt. There are always sob stories around flower markets.

Perhaps I would find an old man who would be arrested for stealing a daisy to put on his son's grave. That's always a swell tear-jerker. Or maybe I would find a ragged little child who would beg one of the flower men on his knees to give him a faded flower for his puppy's grave.

But alas! I stood there some 20 minutes and saw nothing more exciting than an old lady sitting down before a huge bowl of spaghetti in front of a nearby restaurant. It was then that I stirred myself into action. If the story doesn't come to Hellinger, I told myself, Hellinger must go to the story.

I stepped up to one of the flower merchants and began a conversation. My plan of action was very simple. I would first buy a few flowers, and then see if I couldn't wriggle a story out of him!

"Quanto?" I asked. For those of you who haven't mastered the Italian language as I have, I will tell you that that means "how much" in our lingo. At least, I think it does.

The flower man's reply was very simple. He said that the flowers were 20 lire a dozen.

"All right," I asserted pleasantly, as I began to count out 20 lire. "I'll take a dozen."

He looked at me with wide eyes.

"Signor is an American?" he inquired.

I nodded. He sighed.

"You are getting the bargain," he murmured. "I should be getting 50 lire for these flowers instead of the 40 I asked."

He made no sale and I got no story.

I walked for fully another hour without encountering a single solitary thing that might be turned into a sob story. Feeling plenty discouraged, I hailed a cab and returned to this hotel. From sheer fatigue—or possibly it was force of habit—I wandered into the barroom and threw myself into a heavily cushioned chair.

John walked over to me. John is the bartender and his name isn't really John. He told me his actual name the first day I was here, and the first few miles of it sounded like John. So John it has been ever since.

I like John. He is pleasing to the eye and restful to the ear. You never grow hoarse trying to call him because, before you have finished one drink, he has another one before you. Yes, indeed.

"Mr. Hellinger looks weary," John observed.

"I am weary, John," I replied. "I've been out looking for a sob story all morning. Any kind of a story, so far as that goes. If I could only find one—"

I stopped abruptly. The woman in green had entered the barroom and seated herself directly across from me. That's the only name by which I know her—the woman in green. I'm absolutely serious when I tell you that she is one of the strangest females I have ever seen.

I have now been here several days and I have yet to see her speak to a soul aside from the bartender. She never wears anything but green, and her eyes are large and mysterious. She sits in the barroom for hours at a time, gazes at the ceiling through narrowed eyes and drinks nothing but cherry brandy.

Men flirt with her as they pass through the room, but she ignores them completely. I have never encountered anyone quite like her. She seems almost supreme in her loneliness. And she is far from being an unattractive woman.

"John," I whispered suddenly as she sat down, "that woman may be my story. What do you know about her?"

The bartender shook his head.

"To be truthful, sir," he returned, "I know nothing about her. She has been here almost two weeks. She sits in here three-quarters of the day, orders cherry brandy after cherry brandy—and speaks to no one.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, sir. I'll ask the clerk about her. He generally knows all there is to know."

He walked out in the direction of the desk . . .

While he was gone I looked at the woman. That she was worried about something, there could be no doubt. Her lover, beyond all question. What else would drive a woman to cherry brandy?

My fancy strayed. The story began to take form in my mind. The woman in green was unquestionably a Russian. Very possibly she had been very close to the royal family just before the war. Some terrible sadness had entered her life. It had left a definite imprint upon her. What else but the war could have done it?

The story was coming easier now. Her lover—probably her ideal man since her childhood days—held a title of high rank. He had gone away to war. They must have been married just before he left. Then there had been a child. A beautiful little child with golden curls.

Then came the downfall of the imperial government. Tossed out of her home with her helpless baby and forced to shift for herself. What was the poor woman to do? Men. More men. And still more men. It was either that—or starvation for her and that beautiful child.

In a little village—only a year or so before I saw her—she had met her man again. Their meeting had been sad; almost pitiful. She had told him all. She had confessed everything. Their child, she had said, was being raised in a convent in ignorance of the life her mother had lived.

Her man—growing older now—had sworn that he would go to America and return in one year. He would bring back enough money, he swore, to keep them healthy and happy the rest of their lives. He would meet her in the Hotel Excelsior just one year from that date. They parted.

And here she was, waiting. Waiting. Waiting . . .

John was back. The story had grown large in my mind. I looked at him anxiously.

"Did you find out, John?" I asked. "Who is she?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Her name is Klotch," was the reply. "She is a German circus rider, and she is waiting in Rome for some special horse to arrive!" . . .

To take off fat—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents—get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat—your money gladly returned.

Let that COLD Play Only a One-Night Stand!

Drive a Cold Out of the System Overnight by Quick and Proper Treatment

Don't temporize with a cold. A cold—or grippe—can quickly turn into something else. Be quick—be zealous—in your treatment of a cold. A cold can be expelled overnight if you act promptly enough and use the right thing.

First, take a COLD remedy for a cold. A cold is a specific condition calling for a specific treatment. A cure-all is not a dependable remedy. A preparation that is good for a dozen ills and ailments can't be equally effective for a cold. Many popular remedies make the relief of a cold more difficult because they are constipating and also make the system acid.

Second, take a cold remedy administered internally. A cold is an internal infection and, as such, calls for internal treatment. Local, or outside applications, afford only temporary relief and do not reach the real seat of the trouble and do not prevent the infection from spreading within the system.

As Your Doctor Will Tell You—

Correct treatment for a cold is supplied in Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. As your doctor will tell you, no better prescription for a cold could be written. First of all, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, the first requisite in the treatment of a cold. Second, it kills the cold germs in the system, drives out the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Safe for Young and Old

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is safe for young and old to take. It contains no narcotics and does not produce any bad after-effects. It does not upset the stomach, nauseate or make the head ring or swim. In dainty tablet form, it is convenient and pleasant to take, as well as effective. All over the world Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is regarded as the standard cold remedy. These famous tablets come in handy, pocket size boxes and are sold by every drug store in America.

Overnight!

Get a box of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine today and at the first sign of a cold, when the sneezing or headache begins, take a few of the tablets immediately. This is enough usually to stop the cold. Say "NO" to any dealer who tries to sell you a substitute.

DOCTOR'S WORK HERE GIVES ASTHMA CURE HOPE

POLITICS

Smith Is Named As Compromise

By MARK SHIELDS

Gov. Pinchot, in appointing Attorney Ralph H. Smith to the vacancy existing on the Common Pleas Court bench of Allegheny County has, in addition to giving to the court the assistance of an able and energetic young lawyer, extricated himself from a political impasse created by the rival arguments of two groups of his followers here.

Mr. Shields

One headed by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, was insistent that Attorney W. Clyde Grubbs, first suggested for a place on the Public Service Commission, should be named judge when Judge Swearingen resigned.

The other, composed of Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence, Senator Frank J. Harris and Judge James H. Gray, supported the qualifications of Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay.

For weeks the rival claims have raged, McGovern insistent that he should be recognized as the Pinchot leader, particularly vehement in championing Grubbs because of the abrupt manner in which Pinchot had turned down arguments that Allegheny County through Grubbs should be recognized in filling vacancies on the Public Service Commission.

* * *

Challenge Made to Power of McGovern

The Lindsay candidacy became a challenge to McGovern's supremacy. There is not as much harmony in the Independent movement as there was prior to the last successful rising against the Republican organization in the county elections of 1931, and the group supporting Lindsay was insistent that it was entitled to some recognition.

Therefore, the judicial post became something of a symbol of prestige among these groups, and meanwhile there was a drive for other candidates. James M. Magee brought to the front Attorney Lee Beatty, but this served only to roil the waters and kill off both Grubbs and Lindsay, Magee talking against Grubbs particularly in his advocacy of Beatty.

Neither group will be able to find much positive fault with the Smith appointment, a compromise. The young judge was active in the Pinchot campaign in 1930, played a leading part in the Independent county campaign in 1931, and was manager of the campaign hereabouts when Gen. Smedley Butler—then a friend of Gov. Pinchot, but not now—was the Independent candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination.

On that Independent ticket was Ralph Flinn, brother of Mrs. Lawrence, and Smith did yeoman service for Allegheny County's candidate for Auditor General.

Pinchot's action in naming Smith was something of a surprise. By men closest to the Governor it was stated positively no more than 10 days ago that Grubbs had been finally decided upon, that the case was closed. But the pro-Lindsay group refused to see it that way, and was so emphatic that the Governor was compelled to rescind his decision.

* * *

Original Dicker on Prosecutor's Post

Smith's name first came into the judicial discussion when McGovern was trying to arrange a deal by which District Attorney Andrew Park would have been appointed judge, with either Smith or Lindsay to be named by the banc of judges as District Attorney.

Lindsay declined to participate in this program as it was being instituted by McGovern and Commissioner C. M. Barr, realizing for one thing that it simply wasn't in the wood, and also being averse to what is reported to have been the joker in the dicker, that the new District Attorney should take his orders from the Commissioners' office.

Then McGovern is understood to have felt out the judges on the subject of Smith as a district attorney should Park be put on the bench. Smith had been a candidate against Park in the 1931 primary, and made a surprisingly fine race. But it is reported McGovern's proposal never reached first base with the judges.

Whereupon the chairman of the county board turned to Grubbs as a judicial appointee, the effort to get control of the district attorney's office through appointment being abandoned.

* * *

Effect of Next Vote For Judges Doubtful

What effect the Smith selection will have on the next judicial election is speculative. Judges James R. Macfarlane and Harry Rowand must run again if they wish to remain on the bench. They were naturally anxious for an appointee who could rally behind him unified independent elements in the hope that a slate of the sitting judges could be formed. How they will regard Smith as an addition to their ranks remains to be seen, the only criterion being their indisposition to appoint him district attorney.

Furthermore, Lindsay, defeated in the primary last year, but active in the meanwhile in keeping his fences up, can be counted on as a candidate, splitting the forces of the independents, who are apt to aim their fire at Judge Macfarlane in particular.

NUMBERS MAN AGAIN HELD FOR COURT

Accused in Lottery Sales to Children In Squirrel Hill

Convicted more than a year ago of operating a lottery, Dominic Cinquegrani, of 718 Graphic street, today again had been held for court on a similar charge following his arrest yesterday in Squirrel Hill.

He was arraigned before Alderman Sol Goldstein, political leader of the Fourteenth Ward, who said the arrest was the result of numbers sales to school children. Cinquegarani was arrested in Murray avenue by Deputy Constable Leonard Miller.

At the time of his first arrest, Cinquegrani created a stir by naming City Detectives Robert Burke and James Noon as agents of the lottery racket. The detectives were later acquitted.

The district in which Cinquegrani was arrested yesterday had been reported free of gambling in the constable's report Monday to Judge Frank P. Patterson.

Bellevue Rate Fight Assistants Named

A committee to represent the borough in a campaign against high utility rates was named at a meeting last night of Bellevue Council.

Thomas K. Hunter, chairman of the committee on light and telephone rates, and Charles A. Saints, chairman of the committee on water, gas and garbage, were selected by Council to meet with representatives of other municipalities in the fight.

Nation Voted Beer; Gets Not Even a Pretzel

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

In November the public voted for beer, pretzels and pickles.

One month later the crippled goslings of Congress proved that we are not responsible for votes left over thirty days.

They out-quacked the wets. The hobbled ganders kept the eighteenth affidavit in the books and the flag flying on the 1933 budget.

But there's more than one way to clean a fish. The wets come right back again with a beer injunction demanding that Congress produce the body of the keg. Known in law as the corpus delicious.

Then they will celebrate the old English Christmas festival called bringing in the Yule lager.

In the illegal but satisfactory interim we will have to while away childhood's happy hours in the blind tigers.

Mr. Hoover mentioned none of these fermented details in his presidential message which he probably wrote when he was expecting to be re-elected.

Grand Duchess Marie Again Visits Pittsburgh And Brings More Rain

GRAND DUCHESS MARIE . . 'I BROUGHT RAIN TO PITTSBURGH'

REFORMER RAPS PULPIT, PRESS

Addressing the annual mass meeting of the National Reform Association in the Second Presbyterian Church last night, Cameron Ralston, executive secretary of the Chicago Committee of 100, laid the blame for what he called "America's moral and political bankruptcy" to politics, the pulpit and the press.

The meeting followed an informal dinner in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Earlier in the day the annual business session adopted resolutions protesting efforts of Congress to restore the liquor traffic, and pledging the association to fight against repeal of the Pennsylvania Blue Laws.

The whirlpool of critical conditions has failed to produce a real leader in political life, Ralston charged. He said:

Writer Autographs Books, Talks of European Visit

It rained in Pittsburgh yesterday because the former Grand Duchess Marie of Russia came to town. She said so herself. She continued:

"My friends tell me I always bring bad weather to Pittsburgh. This is my fourth or fifth visit here, and I have yet to encounter a nice day."

In spite of what she has found to be consistently bad weather, the Duchess is very fond of Pittsburgh. She said:

"I have a great many friends here. Pittsburgh was the first city I lectured in, in America."

Recently returned from a five-week visit in Europe, Duchess Marie reported conditions little changed there.

The Duchess yesterday autographed her two books, "The Education of a Princess" and "A Princess in Exile" for book-lovers at the Joseph Horne Company. On her return to New York she plans to study art.

She left Pittsburgh for Cleveland last night.

'LUXURY' WATER FIGHT BEFORE P.S.C. HALTS

Burden of Proof as To Rates Put on Mt. Lebanon

Declaring the Public Service Commissioners had found the new rate schedule of the South Pittsburgh Water Company provided generally a reduction in rates, Commissioner Samuel Walter told counsel for Mt. Lebanon Township today the burden of proof rested with the township in its complaint that rates under the new schedule were excessive. The reduction amounts to about $1.86 to the average consumer.

The hearing before Commissioners Walker and P. S. Stahlnecker was adjourned on motion of George P. Kountz, counsel for the complainant, after Kountz had attempted unsuccessfully to have the ruling concerning the burden of proof reversed. Walker said the decision would be placed before the full commission before the hearing was resumed, and that he believed it would be upheld.

Kountz argued the new schedule did not show definitely nor specifically any new additions or decreases in rates; that the rates were revised without it being shown specifically what the revisions were, and that as a result, the consumers did not know what changes were made.

Walker told Kounz if he wanted to place the burden of proof on the water company, he first must prove the rates were higher.

On the bench with the Commissioners was Edward Mather, assistant solicitor of the commission's legal department. Charles P. Lang, assistant city solicitor, was at the counsel table with Attorney Kountz. He explained the city was not intervening in the case, but that he was aiding counsel for Mt. Lebanon Township.

County Joins Fight On Utility Rates

C. H. McCullough, utilities engineer in the Department of Property and Supplies, has been assigned by the County Commissioners to work with Attorney William A. Walker, representing several Ohio valley towns and townships in a fight to bring about reduced utilities rates.

Attorney Walker, who was active in organizing communities in the Ohio Valley, told the Commissioners a permanent organization has been formed and will fight to reduce light, heat and water rates. The Commissioners were informed that Pittsburgh has assigned Assistant City Solicitor Charles Lang as its representative.

DRYS RAID CLUB IN CARRICK

A raid on Carrick Aerie No. 1520, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at 2122 Brownsville road, last night, yielded prohibition agents 160 gallons of beer, 175 gallons of mash, seven quarts of whisky, two gallons of alcohol and a quart of gin flavoring, according to the raiders' report.

In the basement of the two-story building the agents reported finding a large beer vault, and on the first floor a 40-foot bar. Michael B. Pistorious was arrested. The raid followed the reported purchase of drinks in the place.

GENTLEMEN FIGHTERS . THEY QUIT THE RING WITH RESPECT

The author has sketched his boyhood days, when the Hudson River was his swimmin' hole enlivened often with impromptu scraps, until he left school at 15 to become a $5-a-week office boy. His first ring idol was Jack Goodman, New York's famed West Side lightweight of two decades ago. Two Willies — Ward and Green — help Gene in his fistic infancy. Green is trying to knock out Gene.

By GENE TUNNEY

CHAPTER III.

Up to this time I had boxed with youngsters of practically my own age and experience. Here was a finished professional fighter, hitting like the kick of a mule with either hand and weaving in front of me, trying to make an opening so that he could land a knockout. I was confused. He realized this and the fact that I was just a novice. After battering me around for two and a half rounds he said, in the middle of the third round:

"Am I hitting too hard?"

To which I angrily replied, "No, no, I am all right. Go ahead!"

We finished the bout. Green enraged because he had not knocked me out and I furious, feeling that advantage had been taken of me. I learned by this experience that I was but a child in the hands of a professional. I never knew that nine minutes could be such an eternity. If only I could learn a little of this man's knowledge.

After a shower and a half-mile walk home I was still dazed when I got in bed. I slept soundly. The next morning my head was clear and, after going over in my mind the experience of the night before, I decided that I would never box a professional again.

It is curious how long this respect for professionals stayed with me. Some weeks later, just as the gymnasium was closing for the evening, Willie Green came into the building and asked Willie Ward and me to come over to the apartment of the instructor, Gerald Byrnes, to give him a little workout. I intended to refuse but suddenly something about the prospect of boxing with him again fascinated me. My desire to acquire some of his knowledge returned to me overwhelmingly. I agreed to go along.

LONG ROUNDS

We boxed in the kitchen of the apartment. We did not have over three feet one way and six another. I held the watch while Green and Willie Ward boxed, after which Ward held the watch for Green and me. I was so spellbound while holding the watch for Ward that I let one round go five minutes. When it was Ward's turn to be timekeeper, thinking that I had purposely extended his match, he played the same trick on me. The third round went six minutes. Although at times I felt as though the kitchen ceiling had fallen on my head, my frame of mind after this match was somewhat different from the confusion which followed the first. I gained confidence. I was but 16 and entirely free from pugilistic aspiration. I loved the sport with immeasurable devotion, however.

I had a good position, as positions went in those days, with all the opportunity for advancement that is possible in a steam-

NEW METHOD OF TREATMENT AIDS MANY

Lungs Impregnated With Chemicals by Dr. Anderson

A cure for bronchial asthma—the cause and cure of which long have baffled medical science—is seen as the probable result of experiments over a seven-year period by Dr. William Anderson at the West Penn Hospital.

The treatment, which involves impregnating the lungs with oil medicated with iodine, chlorine and other chemicals, revolutionizes methods of care for the condition.

Seventy-five persons have finished the course of treatments and have gone for from one to five years without further attack—evidence of success which has attended no other treatment.

METHOD OF TREATMENT

Until further experiments have been completed, however, Dr. Anderson refuses to describe his procedure as a "cure." He says:

"One swallow doesn't make a summer. A few cures only indicate that we are on the right track.

"Bronchial asthma is a scourge worse than death. It hangs with some people for 40 and 50 years. It will be a wonderful thing if we can find a cure for it."

Treatment is directly through the throat. A local anesthetic is administered and a simple apparatus introduces the medicine into the windpipe. The oil penetrates to the remote parts of the lungs, is absorbed by the system, while the iodine, chlorine and other chemicals attack the spots of infection.

EXTEND EXPERIMENTS

Children and adults can be treated equally well, although Dr. Anderson says in a preliminary report in the Journal of Allergy:

"More patients must be observed for longer periods before final judgment may be passed on the merits of this treatment for asthma. However, in regard to those so far treated, in which none failed to respond, it may be said that the relief obtained exceeds that from any other methods employed with them."

Before Dr. Anderson made his experiments, lung diseases never had been treated through the lung itself. Medical science had held that such treatments would be harmful. Experiments will, it is understood, be conducted with pneumonia, hay fever and other allergical diseases in the future in an effort to see if the Anderson method can be effective.

That asthma is a lung disease is also a revolutionary idea to the profession.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 7. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

This country is so hungry they could eat a lame duck. If you want to really know one of the major things that's wrong with us, go take a nickel, get this week's Saturday Evening Post. Read the first article in there, it's by Sam Blythe, then go out and, before you buy the baby a rattle, your sweetheart a toothbrush, your wife a pair of rubber boots, ask if they "were made in America?" Then you can show your patriotism. And not just keep asking "What's the matter with this country?" England is doing it, the world is doing it, but our society don't think they smell right unless they been dipped in foreign perfume.

Yours, WILL.

Man With Remade Skull Losing Personality

Nandor's skull was splintered in an Armistice Day automobile crash. He survived the operation during which his skull was reshaped and a piece of bone was extracted.

Through it all he snapped his fingers at pain and the ever-present shadow of death.

Now, physicians are confronted with a perplexing change in Nandor's personality. He apparently has lost entirely his former personality and has become a new type of individual. Dr. C. E. Nisch, staff surgeon at the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital, said:

"Most surprising of the indications of this change is Nandor's suddenly conceived fear of pain. Nandor bore intense pain throughout the early part of his sojourn in the hospital without a murmur. But now he screams and cries with the slightest treatment of a minor abrasion."

The personality metamorphosis has not decreased Nandor's mental capacity, physicians said.

CITY FAILS TO REDUCE MOTOR FLEET OF OFFICIALS

KLINE AND MANY AIDES RIDE AT PUBLIC COST

A fleet of passenger automobiles is operated at the expense of the taxpayers for the convenience of Mayor Charles H. Kline, the heads of his departments and various other city

Early this year the automobiles in use by the city for this purpose numbered 45. There has been little or no reduction in this number, according to well-informed sources.

Many of the department heads use the city cars to ride to and from work. This does not include 150 trucks, 115 police service cars, and 119 fire service units in use for regular city business during the early part of 1932.

KLINE RIDES IN STYLE

Mayor Kline has a luxurious sedan. A chauffeur and chauffeur-mechanic are included in the payroll of his office. This is in marked contrast to Philadelphia, where the cars of the city officials have been taken from them.

At Mayview, there are two passenger cars at the call of Dr. J. S. Hammers, superintendent.

CLARK, WALSH HAVE CARS

Director James M. Clark, of the Department of Public Safety, and Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh, both are equipped with city cars to use at will. The heads of the departments of Health and Public Works both have cars.

Even the superintendent of the city stables was driving a city car early in the year, and the superintendent of the city garage had one, although it was recorded as being six years old.

Among other city officials recorded as having the use of cars early this year were the superintendents of the bureaus of recreation, building inspection, traffic planning, water, tests, bridges, parks, weights and measures and maintenance. The city paymaster and the superintendent of the asphalt plant were also listed.

Gunman Balks Chase In Holdup on 'Hill'

A Negro who held up Louis Wittenstein, proprietor of the Webster avenue market, at 2218 Webster avenue, and obtained $42 last night, was being sought by Center avenue police today.

The gunman took $40 from Wittenstein's pocket and the $2 from the cash register. As the Negro fled, his victim picked up a meat cleaver and attempted to give chase, but the robber warned him he would shoot if he stepped outside.

'Y' Assistance to Youth Enlarged

Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. aid extended to youths in the district in 1932 exceeded other years, it was indicated today by Fred C. Benner, executive secretary of the Downtown Branch. Unemployed youths from other districts were returned to their homes, many were continued in night schools after their funds had been exhausted and scores were given food and sheltered during periods of unemployment, Benner said.

ANCIENT HOAX FAILS HERE

There is one Reuben in town who is not all the name implies. He is Reuben Adelman, 2528 Beechwood boulevard.

He received a letter from Spain yesterday that seems to be an old Spanish custom.

It said that a certain party in Spain was in jail because of a bankruptcy suit and that with a little financial aid from Adelman everything would be well. He also said he would reimburse Adelman with a third of his fortune, $120,000.

Adelman was dubious of the letter for three reasons. First, he had never heard of the party who sent it; second, he had received a similar letter 15 years ago; third, the letter was mimeographed.

Adelman has notified the federal authorities, as he feels they can answer the letter better than he.

BACK BURGESS IN SUSPENSION

Wilmerding Council last night upheld the suspension by Burgess R. W. Bishop of Police Capt. Leonard L. Locke for "conduct unbecoming an officer." No specific charges were made.

Council Charles A. Ray, the lone minority member of the body, wanted to know "why all the secrecy." He said:

"I understand the police committee of Council, of which I am a member, held a meeting, but I was not invited."

Councilman Joseph R. Dick, chairman of the police committee, denied holding a meeting, and said Council would "take the burgess' word for it."

On the vote on the officer's suspension without pay until January 1, seven councilmen approved it. Ray did not vote.

A general reduction of 25 per cent of the borough's budget must be made, Councilman W. J. Gilmartin, chairman of the finance committee, informed the body.

DEBATERS MEET AT BREAKFAST

Clarence Darrow and his debate opponent, Judge M. A. Musmanno, will meet at breakfast Monday morning to make final plans for their discussion of immortality that evening at Carnegie Music Hall.

Darrow has advised the committee that he will arrive early Monday and go immediately to the Pittsburgher Hotel, where the debaters will meet for the first time. Both interested primarily in the practice of criminal law, both arch-foes of capital punishment, alike in their views on social justice, and with records of having handled a large percentage of their cases without fees, it is expected their differences on the subject of immortality will make them only "friendly enemies" on the platform.

With proceeds of the debate going to relief funds, through the afternoon newspapers of Pittsburgh, there has been a popular response in ticket sales, says A. H. Brockett, in charge at C. C. Mellor's.

BROOKS LEADS AS RECOUNT NEARS END

In spite of a loss of 123 votes yesterday, Twing Brooks, Democrat, continued to hold a lead of 240 votes over Edmund F. Erk, his Republican opponent for the Thirtieth District congressional seat, as the recount contest neared its close.

Only the Seventh and Eighth district boxes from the Twenty-fourth Ward remained to be recounted, with neither side indicating desire for additional tabulations.

Return Judges W. H. McNaugher and John P. Egan today were to announce a list of several boxes on which the $50 deposit posted for a recount will not be returned to the petitioners because of the absence of fraud. A total of 47 boxes, with deposits of $2,350, were impounded for recount.

Congressman Erk gained 73 votes yesterday when the return judges ordered the recount figures certified in the Eighth District of the Twenty-third Ward, after a hearing of the election board failed to convince the court that fraud had been committed after they made their count.

Erk picked up an additional 50 votes on the recount of the first six districts in the Twenty-fourth Ward.

INJURY FATAL TO POLICEMAN

Mr Kehr

Emil Kehr, 43, of 3202 Bookman street, Brentwood, motorcycle policeman, died late yesterday in South Side Hospital from a fractured skull suffered Saturday when his motorcycle skidded on Brownsville road as he was on his way to a fire.

An unidentified Negro, about 45, was in South Side Hospital today with a fractured skull suffered when the two-mule wagon he was riding in River road, near Becks Run road, was struck by a Pittsburgh-Munhall bus last night, county detectives reported. Walter Guschak, of Whitaker, bus driver, and five passengers escaped injury.

Suffering bruises when he ran against the side of a moving automobile while playing at California avenue and Halsey place, Joseph Wanchark, 8, of 2341 McCook street, was treated at St. John's Hospital last night.

Florence Rosanna, 25, of 5515 Claybourne street, was taken to West Penn Hospital after being struck by an automobile at Baum boulevard and Friendship avenue last night. The machine was said to have been driven by Emil Sullivan, of 362 South Negley avenue.

DOGS APLENTY FOR YULE GIFTS

The Animal Rescue League at Rosedale, on the Verona road, is all set for the Christmas season with a plentiful supply of canine pets for little Mary and Johnny.

Last year the league had only 18 dogs in the kennels before the holiday season, but this year there are 80. Peter Young, who is in charge of the Rescue League, said today:

"Last Christmas people were here at 7 in the morning and even got me out of bed at 2 a. m. to ask for a dog. I'm glad that we have lots of them this year."

The Rosedale kennel wards apparently like their quarters, Young said, but he believes they are happier in a good home where somebody can pet them now and then.

WILD CARGO :-: By FRANK BUCK

CHAPTER XLVII.

In Siam, the white elephant is worshiped as a sacred animal possessing divine affiliations. The king houses several of them in splendor near the palace in Bangkok. A retinue of servants attends them and they are given titles designating them as members of royalty. When ill they are ministered to in a manner leaving no doubt that there are no higher-ranking nobles in the land. Should death occur, one of the court dignitaries—a brother noble—takes charge, and, after impressive religious ceremonies, has the animal cremated.

In Burma the white elephant is also regarded as a sacred beast, but it is not worshipped as fanatically as was the case in the bygone days when the country was an independent state ruled by its own king. A British colony today, Burma still makes a big fuss over its white elephants, but nothing compared with what she used to do when she was her own boss.

In those times, according to a venerable soldier of fortune (an old friend who claims to know and ought to), these freaks of nature were decked out in robes of velvet and gold, studded with precious stones. It was one of the duties of the royal choir to sing to them at regular hours. The king's cabinet would even consult the animals on important governmental affairs, gravely setting forth their problems and interpreting various movements of the white pachyderms—movements of the trunk, legs and tail—as indicating the course to be pursued in the matters of state under discussion.

HUGE OFFER REJECTED

While it is true that the Burmese have sobered somewhat on the subject of white elephants, they still have a bad hangover.

I discovered this shortly after I cabled my agent in San Francisco to see how far I could go in bidding for the Katha catch. I figured that if I went high enough I could land the coveted albino. My agent cabled back that I could safely bid as high as $50,000. This I did. The reply was as complete a turndown as anyone has ever given me.

It was to the effect that my unflattering offer could not be taken seriously. Did I realize that the animal was insured for 35,000 British pounds?

Would I please refrain (concluded the keddah walla) from making any more of my offers, which were not regarded as complimentary since they implied that the owners of the sacred beast could be persuaded to betray the Burmese people by parting with a priceless religious asset?

PLACED ON EXHIBITION

So that was that. I recall my amusement over the broad hints that something would surely happen to the person that took a white elephant out of Burma.

Some months later at Rangoon I had an opportunity to see the white elephant for which I had negotiated so strenuously. It had been brought down to the Rangoon Zoo and placed on exhibition there in a special enclosure. The zoo did a land office business, even the poorest natives managing somehow to dig up the modest price of admission so that they might pay homage to Pa Wa (the name which had been given the white elephant).

At regular intervals the mumbling of the praying figures would swell into a loud chant, the worshippers swaying to and fro as their discordant mutterings filled the air.

LOTS OF EXCITEMENT

One native by my side, irritated by the wall of backs that kept him in the rear and prevented his getting as close to Pa Wa as he felt he should be, temporarily forgot that the white elephant, among other things, was a divine messenger of peace, and dealt one of the kneeling forms that blocked his path a terrific kick that sent the recipient thereof banging into one of the priests.

This upset the holy man and knocked the begging bowl out of his hand, spilling in all directions his harvest of bits of food—bread, fruit, etc., begged of shop-keepers along the way to the zoo.

Pa Wa remained on display at the Rangoon Zoo for several weeks. The animal's fame spread rapidly—with the result that not long after the admiring hordes at Rangoon started paying their annas to see this emissary from the Buddhist heaven, the London Zoological Society, one of the most powerful organizations of its kind in the world, started a series of maneuvers designed to secure it as a star exhibit.

PRIESTS OBJECT

The idea was to borrow Pa Wa and put this pachyderm rarity on view in the London Zoo. No white elephant had ever been seen in the white man's world and the Zoological Society, with no motive except a perfectly normal desire to score a scientific scoop, brought a tremendous amount of influence to bear in an effort to accomplish its purpose. It was necessary to conduct these negotiations with a maximum of caution, for the English, though they have the upper hand in Burma, had no desire to antagonize the populace.

Working with England's high colonial officials, the society succeeded—after a series of negotiations that taxed the diplomatic powers of those representatives of Britain in this strange foreign land—in getting the O. K. which they sought.

I understand that among the more fanatical priests and laymen there were angry mutterings—even threats of reprisal—when it become known that for the first time in the history of Burma permission had been granted to let a white elephant out of the country.

Still others were said to have voiced this sentiment: "Let the English use their influence and get permission to remove Pa Wa from Burma. What good will it do them? Surely there is not an elephant driver in the land or a mahout (trainer) foolish enough to join forces with so foolhardy an enterprise. For death—and only death—awaits the sacrilegious ones capable of so vicious a betrayal."

NATIVES WON OVER

At first it was difficult to find natives who were willing to accompany the expedition to England.

However, even in Burma it is possible to find natives who can be made to forget the vengeance-dealing proclivities of the country's religious bogeymen. Persuasive arguments, to the tune of clinking gold, gained their end. And not long after the London Zoological Society launched its campaign of persuasion, Pa Wa was on the way to England in sumptuous quarters aboard a first-class boat, in the care of a group of attendants that included a mahout named Said Ali, an elephant driver known as Sandy Wee, and Me Wai, a Shan States boy-of-all-jobs, who had once helped me bring a shipment of elephants from Rangoon to Singapore.

I afterwards learned from Me Wai that when Pa Wa's retinue, after agreeing to the trip, showed signs of wavering, they were told: "Know you not how absurd it is to show such fear? Are you not going to England, a civilized country? Is it likely that anyone will walk up to you in England and stick a knife in you? Are you men or children? Know you not that mighty England will protect you at all times?" This was too much for the members of Pa Wa's staff. They capitulated.

"MOIST THROAT" AIDS COUGH RELIEF

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny bottles continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues . . . until you "catch cold."

Then these "bottles" get plugged up, phlegm accumulates, affording dangerous germs a breeding place. Your throat feels hot and dry. Tickling, irritation and coughing set in.

Your cough will be cured only when the flow of the natural fluid is increased, loosening the phlegm so that it can be expelled. Many cough "remedies" contain numbing drugs which merely deaden the nerves . . . but don't get at the root of the trouble.

PERTUSSIN, a scientific remedy, which doctors have prescribed for many years, is the extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of the throat's natural moisture and brings quick relief. It helps nature heal that awful cough from the inside out.

When you feel that warning dryness take a few spoons of PERTUSSIN. It's absolutely safe. Sold at all drug stores, 60¢.

Last night was a gala get-together of society folk, and the occasion was the opening for the season of the Stage and Play Society in "Mary's Ankle" at the Twentieth Century Club.

Relatives came to see members of their families as actors and actresses, and friends to see their friends on the stage. And before the curtain rose, folks were having brief chats in the foyer, a most satisfactorily large one, by the way.

Among those in the boxes were the H. Vaughan Blaxters, their debutante daughter, Dorothy, in flax blue crepe and petite brunette Patricia Witherow in flame red crepe.

I also saw Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., chatting with friends in the lobby.

Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby was lovely in a black pebble crepe dinner gown having long sleeves, slashed above the elbows and bound with bands of cloth of silver, the decolletage was square. Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife had a similar gown, much to her and Mrs. Jacoby's good-natured chagrin.

Bands of Silver

Mrs. Clark Miller wore a gown of black velvet and heavy cream lace. Virginia Louise Johnston was in black velvet, Betty Orr in blue velvet, Mrs. A. C. Martin in white crepe, Miss Neil Stewart in black lace, Mrs. William Zang in dark blue satin.

Mrs. H. Allen Machesney, Jr., I had a glimpse of and Mrs. Harold Williams, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn and Mrs. John W. Lawrence, who arrived together; Martha Edmondson in bittersweet berry red; Betty McCance, Mrs. Mortimer Miller and her mother, Mrs. Roy Hunt.

I saw Virginia Drake, Mrs. H. Allen Machesney, Sr., Mrs. F. I. Merrick, in black crepe having an inset of silver lace; Miss Medeleine McClintock, Miss Eleanor Grier, Mrs. Joseph M. Scribner and Mrs. George Pearson, all faithful Stage and Play supporters.

Theodore Miller, in the First Baptist Church.

The bride wore a gown of royal blue velvet with a matching turban and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Eleanor Jacobs, who wore wine velvet and carried pink Columbia roses. Paul Crawford was his brother's best man.

Mrs. Jacobs wore an ensemble of black velvet and Mrs. Crawford chose brown velvet. Both wore Talisman roses.

After the reception for the families in the Jacobs home, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford left for Adrian, where they will be at home after Saturday. ATTENDING STAGE AND PLAY'S OPENING

MISS MARY RUST — MISS ALICE RUST — MRS. HENRY OLIVER EVANS

-:- Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane -:-

In their very early days of producing plays, frail, white-haired and aristocratic Mrs. Albert M. Pettit and her sister, Miss Sophie Keenan, had their audience run away, weeping with fright.

When they were children, they presented "Blue Beard" and invited all their little friends. The terrifying scene was their depiction of Blue Beard's beheaded wives.

These amateur stage managers hung up a sheet, slit a hole for each wife's head, pinned up their raven locks to give the impression the heads were hung by the hair, and splashed red ink about liberally.

The sisters, who live together in Forbes street now, have a little theater in their home where plays are produced. They both write plays, and Mrs. Pettit has had several published, and had prize-winning plays presented by the Twentieth Century Club drama group. Both are active in the Drama League.

Colonial history is their favorite play material.

I hardly recognized Aviatrix Helen MacCloskey at the Nixon Monday night, for she wasn't in flying togs, of course. The men she was chatting with in the lobby during intermission seemed to find her most feminine in a graceful frock of black velvet, cut high in front and slashed in the back, and having ermine on white satin as the only accent.

WHITE EVENING GOWN OF WOOL IS SMART AND PRACTICAL

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The smartest white evening dresses in Paris this winter are made of wool. Besides the fact that woolen as an evening fabric is especially new to Paris, there are practical reasons for this sudden popularity. French women — particularly those who wear girdles and corset variations—find that it is only in the woolen evening dress that the figure remains smoothly outlined; the weight of the fabric eliminates the breaks in the line of the silhouette that are bound to come, even on the youngest, most girlish figure.

* * *

MANY OF the better dressmakers go so far as to say that an evening dress, if it is white, should be made only in woolen. It is usually of classic line, following lines of the natural figure, following princess effects and showing no belt. Women who considered themselves too full of figure to wear white satin or crepe find white wool thoroughly satisfactory for evening wear.

* * *

HEIM'S WHITE wool evening dress, in today's sketch, is one of the popular models in Paris right now. It is particularly interesting for its softness of line around the neck and shoulders and for the unusual draping of its sleeves.

* * *

THE HEIM evening wrap, of white ermine, also sketched, was designed with short full sleeves to wear over a sleeved evening dress. The collar is so cut that it may be worn open or closed high around the throat.

KROGER Foods constantly watched for Quality and Condition

KROGER FOOD FOUNDATION representatives buy foods off store shelves regularly for FOUNDATION tests

A young woman walks into a Kroger Store in St. Louis or Grand Rapids . . . or into any one of the thousands of Kroger Stores, anywhere. She asks for a box of crackers, a pound of coffee, a box of prunes, a glass of peanut butter. The store man reaches up on the shelves—hands her the packages—she pays and leaves.

Who is she? One of the millions of housewives who buy their food in Kroger Stores? No! She is acting for The Kroger Food Foundation. She has been asked to purchase this selected list of foods and send them to The Foundation. What for? To be checked and tested and approved for condition and quality, just as they were checked when they came into the Kroger warehouse. Kroger takes this final precaution to make sure that the foods you buy in Kroger Stores are always—and in all ways—up to the high Kroger Standards.

These members of the Kroger Food Patrol visit Kroger Stores regularly. They are told where and when and what to buy from the store shelves. They are the protective arms of The Kroger Food Foundation—the scientific organization that is ever on guard—safeguarding the food for you and your family.

PITT COURT LEADER HURT

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

ECONOMY AX THREATENS OLD PLAYERS

RUMBLINGS FROM THE baseball front indicate that it was only the beginning of what is going to be a general movement in the big leagues when the A's dropped Eddie Rommel, the Tigers dismissed Muddy Ruel, and the Giants released Waite Hoyt and Clarence Mitchell. It looks as though a lot of old-timers are marked men. There are approximately 50 10-year men in the majors, that is players who cannot be sent to the minors without their consent, and who must be given unconditional releases when their services are no longer desired by their big league employers. Many of these may feel the economy ax during the winter.

Bing Miller

A large number of the 10-year pastimers still are valuable players, but others have dropped to utility roles. It appears there is no chance for the latter to hang on at their old salaries. They'll have to take big reductions, in some cases 50 per cent or more, or pass out of the big show altogether. Bing Miller, of the A's, is being mentioned as one veteran certain to be replaced by a youngster, and others are Joe Judge, Sam Rice, Urban Faber, Jack Quinn, Charley Jamieson, Dolf Luque, Herb Pennock and many more.

THE AVERAGE SPORTS follower may be pardoned for wondering why colleges and football coaches go to the trouble to entering into contracts. The parties appear only to be kidding each other or the public. Pop Warner is said to have had terminating privileges at Stanford, but others are different. One day you read that a certain coach has signed with such and such a college for five years. A year later you read he has received an offer from another school and has resigned to accept.

When a coach is under contract at one institution, how can another college ethically make him an offer, and how can he ethically consider it and enter into negotiations? And if it's all ethical in college athletic eyes, why waste the paper required for joke contracts when they're not intended to mean anything? Some circles affect to look down on professional sports, but in the latter division there is at least an old-fashioned idea that contracts are made to be respected both by the signers and by outsiders.

WHILE MANY OTHER grid coaches may be worried about their jobs or salary slashes, there is one who is spared any fretting of that sort. He knows just where he'll be for the next four years and that he's sure of the same pay.

Lieut. Garrison Davidson, Engineer Corps, is all set for that period as coach of Army. It's just a special assignment in the line of duty, and when the time comes to make a change at West Point they'll give him another job elsewhere. And whether he's coaching football or building pontoon bridges he'll continue to draw $160 per month, a far cry from the pay of the average major college mentor.

AUBREY DEVINE, Southern California scout, who watched Notre Dame in five games, declares he was not merely aiming to rouse the Trojans when he reported back after the rout of Army to tell them the Irish had a better team than the one that beat them 27 to 0 two years ago. "That is my actual belief," Devine says. "There isn't a weak spot, and the passing game is a wonder. Notre Dame does not pass like other teams. You never can tell when a pass is coming. It starts with what looks like a running play, and the first thing you know somebody throws the ball."

Tom Thorp

TOM THORP, who refereed the 1922 Rose game in which W. & J. played a scoreless tie with Andy Smith's California Bears, recalls that Brick Muller was a distinct passing threat. His aerials had beaten Ohio State 28 to 0 the season before.

Coach Greasy Neale had the Bears well scouted and had drilled his forwards on rushing Muller every time he attempted a pass. Brick got off a few short passes, and then faded back for one of his famous long throws which was intended to be a scoring play.

THE ENTIRE RUSH line of W. & J. crashed through and almost pulverized Muller before he could make the toss. The California water carriers came out to revive Brick, and the Bear rooters were in a breathless silence with their hero on the ground.

Weiderquist, the giant W. & J. tackle, stood looking down on the almost unconscious Muller. Cupping his hands, he yelled as loudly as he could with his heavy voice in the direction of the California bench: "Take him out, Andy. He's too brittle for us."

THORP ALSO TELLS of a Pitt-West Virginia game. When a fumble occurred, Referee Tiny Maxwell was shut off from the play, but thought he saw the action and sang out, "West Virginia's ball." The Panthers bellowed in a rage, but Maxwell ignored their protests. He looked to the head linesman and umpire for a sign of approval, but was startled to see both signal to him that he had made a mistake. The yelling took on added vigor, but Tiny was doing some fast thinking and signaled for silence. "N-n-never g-g-get excited in a football game," he counseled. "Always remain cool, c-c-calm and collected. When you g-g-get excited you get the officials upset. Then the game goes on the b-b-bum." The storming Pitt players cooled down under Tiny's moralizing. It was then that he pulled one of his classics. "Now that you are quiet, c-c-calm and collected," he said, "I will repeat m-my decision—P-P-PITTSBURGH'S B-B-BALL!"

DESPITE DEL BISSONETTE'S optimistic reports on himself, and the signs he showed in a recent workout that his injured leg is sound again, the Brooklyn Dodgers are not going to run the risk of being left without an experienced first baseman in the event of Del's failing to come through next spring.

So the Dodgers are trying to get a new gateway guardian. The man sought is Sam Leslie, of the Giants, and if they can agree on trading terms with Bill Terry, Leslie may be a Dodger soon.

CAREY TRIED TO make a deal for Leslie last spring, but the Giants refused to part with Sam at that time, desiring to keep him for utility purposes, the role he has filled for two years. Conditions are different now. Carrying an extra man who can play only one position may not fit in with retrenchment plans.

Whether the Dodgers can offer and material that will appeal to Terry is another question. Second Baseman Mickey Finn may be the main bait held out, inasmuch as Hughey Critz is said to be done as a Giant.

Fidel La Barba

IN THESE DAYS of frequent rifts between fighters and managers, an enduring partnership like that of Fidel La Barba and George Blake is noteworthy. Blake and the boxer who is to meet Kid Chocolate for the world featherweight championship Friday night have been together for 13 years. La Barba was a 14-year-old newsboy in Los Angeles when he first came into contact with Blake, then boxing instructor at the Los Angeles A. C. Never has there been the slightest friction between them, and Blake's word is as much law to La Barbo today as it was when Fidel was a kid learning the fundamentals of boxing from his patient instructor. La Barbo at 27 does not even address his manager by his first name. It's still "Mr. Blake."

COAST LEAGUE STANDS FIRM AGAINST CUT

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The thirty-first annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues gets under way here today with stage apparently set for the adoption of a salary and player limits.

Yesterday, after hours of argument and discussion, the International League capitulated and agreed to fix a salary maximum as recommended by the committee of five of the national association.

The limit adopted by the International circuit calls for a payroll expenditure of $39,000 a season per club with no more than $6,500 paid monthly during May, June, July and August. This leaves $13,000 available for salaries of extra players from the opening of the season to May 1 and from September 1 until the close of the season.

ADOPT PLAYER LIMIT

At the same time the International circuit adopted an 18-player limit. This number includes a manager, in case he plays, and is exclusive of the pilot if he is a bench manager.

George Weiss, of the Newark club, cast the only dissenting vote on the two questions.

The action of the International circuit coincides with similar ones approved by the American Association several weeks ago. Only the Pacific Coast League remains adamant to a salary limit among the class AA circuits.

H. L. Baggerley, president of the Pacific group, announced his league would stand pat on its former action and would not accept a limitation. He said his league clubs reduced salaries from 30 to 50 per cent in mid-season and by refusing to adopt a salary limit would in no way interfere with the American Association and International League.

Prospective buyers for the Kansas City and Toledo clubs in the American Association came to the fore yesterday.

KEYSER READY TO BUY

Lee Keyser, owner of the Des Moines Club of the Western League, revealed himself as a possible purchaser of the Blues, but the name of the Toledo bidder was undisclosed.

Keyser declared that last October he obtained an option on Kansas City and that, when he went to exercise it on November 15, directors of the club refused to make the sale but said they would mail him a counter proposal.

Thomas J. Hickey, president of the association, attempted to get in touch with George Muehlebach, present owner of the Blues, to see if the second proposal had been mailed to Keyser, but was unable to reach him by long distance telephone.

CLYMER CLAIM UPHELD

Manager Bill Clymer was declared victor today in his action against the Scranton, Pa., team in the New York - Pennsylvania League for $1,555 salary. The Board of Arbitration announced it has awarded Clymer's claim.

Tris Speaker arrived today and said he is out of baseball for good. He said he was attending the convention only to visit friends.

In an effort to lessen the anguish that must ensue when the 1933 contracts go out to the players, the American Association intends to adopt a plan whereby there will be two playoff series for the pennant with bonus money for the players of each of the six clubs to finish in the race. The plan was tentatively adopted, but its details were withheld, pending official acceptance.

HENDRICKS TO BUY CLUB

Jack Hendricks, former Cincinnati pilot, today announced that he had virtually completed arrangements for the purchase of an International League club, believed to be the Jersey City club.

The organization of a new class D league, to be known as the Northern League, was announced by Bruno Haas.

Haas will serve temporarily as secretary-treasurer of the new league, whose membership will be comprised of Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Eau Claire, Wis., Winnipeg, Crookston, Minn., Grand Forks, S. D., and Little Falls, Minn.

Dick Wade will manage the Duluth club, Johnny Anderson the Grand Forks team, and Dannie Boone the Crookston team. Haas said he would manage the Winnipeg club.

Rube Marquard, former big league pitcher, and Johnny Mostil, former White Sox outfielder, have indicated they would seek managerships probably at St. Paul and Minneapolis, respectively.

STOGIES SEEK BACKER

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Entrance of Wheeling in the Middle Atlantic Baseball League for the coming season depends on whether backing of a major league club is obtained.

Earl Klemm, business manager of the Stogies, which for seven years was a member of the circuit prior to the 1932 season, has announced little hope of re-entry is held unless some major league organization will give support.

DEKUH STOPPED BY WALKER

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7.—(Universal.)—Arthur DeKuh does not want any more of Mickey Walker in a hurry.

Outweighing Mickey by 48 pounds, he lasted less than a round against the New Jersey Bulldog last night at the Olympic Auditorium.

The bout had scarcely started when Walker with a terrific left hook to the jaw sent DeKuh to the canvas for seven seconds. The giant Italian staggered to his feet and was promptly bounced down again, this time for a nine count.

Later DeKuh went down again for seven and he got up from this one, too. But on the fourth trip to the resin he was counted out.

Local Boxers Star In Buffalo Bouts

WHITEY WILSON MAY REPLACE DON SMITH

By JESS CARVER

Pitt's basketball team, which opens its 1932-33 and the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference campaign here Sat'day night against Georgetown, has a new battle song. It starts something like this:

"We'uns heah yuh callin', Mistuh Carolan—"

And then, sotto voice, comes this refrain:

"An' when yuh calls, Mistuh Carolan, yuh bettah duck."

The Carolan gent in question is one Pete Carolan, who has been a football and basketball star at Georgetown for the past two years. It was Carolan's play that beat Pitt in Washington last year. Not only did he beat Pitt, but he gave Chick Davies' Dukes a tough evening on the occasion of the Bluffites visit to the capital last winter, tallying 11 points from a guard position.

PITT AFTER REVENGE

So the Panthers are looking forward to the visit of Carolan and the remainder of the Hoyas Saturday night more or less eagerly, for revenge, even to a college athlete is, pretty sweet.

Dr. George Kowallis was in charge of yesterday's court drill at Pitt and will be the head man again today. Coach Carlson is in Cleveland, attending (and you can bet, helping direct) a two-day basketball clinic. He'll return tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Kowallis is having his troubles, for it is up to him to figure out a temporary realignment of the varsity forces. Capt. Don Smith is nursing an injured back and is not likely to start, or even play, against the Hilltoppers. In his absence, Whitey Wilson, who made his basketball name at New Kensington High School, under Carl Glock, will fill in at forward, and Wilson is capable of turning in a very swell job of filling-in.

JOCK BACK ON JOB

Coach Jock Sutherland was due back in Pittsburgh today to look over his varsity footballers who are preparing for the Rose Tournament game with Southern California. Jock has been in Baltimore since Monday, fussing with his all-North eleven, but he left Eddie Baker, in the Oyster City to handle the all-stars and was to supervise the practice of the Panther varsity this afternoon, when Capt. Paul Reider, who has been out with injuries, is slated to return to the squad.

The Pitt Alumni eleven, which meets the varsity in that practice ball game next week, will have exactly 500 pounds of blocking halfbacks available for the fight. Alumni Coach Ray (All-America) Montgomery plans to use Tom Parkinson and Franklin Hood at the halfback positions in the psuedo-Trojan lineup, and both these babies will come in at 250 pounds apiece the day of the game. They'd both have to whittle off a leg to get under that figure.

A turnout of more than 1,000 is certain for the Pitt court clinic Saturday, which means that at least 3,000 will watch the Panthers and Georgetown battle Sat'day evening. These figures are my beloved brother's, and therefore, to be taken with a sack or two of salt.

The Tipoff

They are planning a football comeback as will be a comeback at St. Vincent, where the grid game was put on probation this last fall. On probation, the game responded so nobly under the careful nursing of Gene Edwards, that it had just about its most successful season at the Bearcat institution.

The Rt. Rev. Archabbot Alfred Koch, in a statement made last night at the annual football banquet, said the class of opposition to be scheduled for the Bearcats for next fall would be tougher and more big league than ever. Villanova, Bucknell and Temple may be added to the schedule. This year's team, of which 34 members were awarded letters, won five games and lost two and boasted one of the outstanding halfbacks in the section in Harry Johnson, who tied with Warren Heiler, of Pitt, and George Favel, of Tech, for high scoring honors with eight touchdowns and 48 points.

Geneva has selected its all-opponents' team, and on the first eleven, leading all others in the number of votes received, was Nick DeCarbo, the Dukes' cracker-jack guard. Other first team members were Hunter, of Marshall, and Best, of St. Vincent, ends; Croft, Tech, and Belfuss, Westminster, tackles; Sample, Tech, at the other guard; Brown, St. Vincent, center, and McCurdy, Tech; Johnson, St. Vincent; Corzine, Davis-Elkins, and Zontini, Marshall, in the backfield.

Reed Brown, well-known local boxing manager, and formerly a peppery little mitt slinger, in his own right, is being considered for the job of boxing coach at Wash-Jeff.

Geneva is going in for wrestling. Ken Loeffler, who studied the gentle art of pickin' 'em up and layin' 'em down (if possible), while a student at Penn State, and who mentors the Geneva basketball varsity, also will drill the grapplers.

YOUTH STEALS SPOTLIGHT IN NATIONAL CUE EVENT

DARING PLAY MARKS WIN OF CARAS

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Veterans of the pocket billiard game will need to keep a weatner eye on young Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del.

Caras, who surprised the experts by winning the Eastern sectional tournament here a few weeks ago, made his first start in the national championships at the Capitol Billiard Academy last night and whipped George Kelly, of Philadelphia 125 to 92, in 19 innings. Kelly was runner-up to Ralph Greenleaf in the 1931 championship.

CARAS' PLAY DARING

Caras played daring billiards against Kelly, consistently attempting difficult shots at which veterans would shy. He ended the match, in fact, with one of them, connecting with a tough across-the-table bank shot for his one hundred and twenty-fifth point. He jumped into the lead with a run of 29, his highest of the night, in the third inning, and never relinquished it. Kelly made two runs of 21, but never really threatened his young rival's advantage.

Caras' victory put him in a tie for the lead with Greenleaf, Bennie Allen, of Kansas City, and Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago. Allen defeated Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, 125 to 74, in 13 innings, and Natalie defeated Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., 125 to 65, in 26 innings yesterday. Greenleaf had beaten James Mills, of San Jose, in the opening match of the championship Monday night.

Edwin Rudolph, of Chicago, and Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, were to make their debuts in the current tournament today, the former meeting Mills and Ponzi tackling Taberski. Tonight's match involved Greenleaf and Franklin.

Allen opened his come-back campaign with a brilliant exhibition of shot making.

ALLEN IN FORM

The 42-year-old veteran, handling the cue with the same technique that carried him to the billiard heights in three successive years, 1913-1915, probably never played better billiards than as he turned back his "dare-devil" rival, who remained in the thick of the fight until the last two innings with a series of difficult shots that threatened for eight frames to spoil Allen's comeback. The former champion hit his stride in the twelfth inning, however, and with a run of 28 passed Franklin.

Holding a margin of five balls after Franklin had pocketed 15 in his half of the twelfth, Allen slowly dropped one after another of the colored ovals in the pockets until he had scored 46—his high run of the game and enough to win.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

—By GIB MARSH—

The deer-hunting camps in Pennsylvania are being deserted and the hunters returning to their homes without antlered bucks. They combed the mountains with their driving crews and failed to find legal bucks and routed very few does. And the major portion of the big-game hunters of the Keystone State never again will approve of a general open season on bucks and does, as tried in 1931. That killing of 70,255 legal-sized does and hundreds of illegal does has proved the fallacy of the 1931 season test.

The hunting still continues to be scanty. The hunters are hoping for a snow, but it is doubtful if tracking will greatly increase the kills. In spite of the surveys made during the early fall, which indicated fairly successful shooting this month, the deer are not being found. The estimated kill of 20,000 head of legal bucks will not be realized. To bag the 20,000 head mark, big kills were required on the first three days of the season. Now the hunters are leaving the mountains and there remain but six more deer-shooting days.

CLOSED SEASON URGED

Already many hunters are advocating a closed season for 1933. However, such a plan is not necessary to assure reasonable hunting next year. The continuation of the present plan of protection and conservation will be adequate. Protection of the spike buck and all does and the continuation of the present bag limit will restore the deer in the mountains in the same large numbers as in the seasons of 1929, 1930 and 1931. It is reasonable to conclude it will be many years before the sportsmen and game commissioners will repeat the doe reduction test of 1931.

The writer observed the herds of deer increase in large numbers under the present system of protection and propagation in Pennsylvania. During a period of 18 years he saw the annual kills increase from 2,800 head of bucks to nearly 23,000 head in 1929. And the growth of the deer herds was accomplished for many years with only a few large preserves.

CAN BE RESTORED

Now the state owns 39 large preserves, many auxiliary preserves and several hundred thousand acres of public shooting area, which can be converted into protected regions for breeding grounds and conservation purposes. In a short time the deer can be restored.

FULLER BEATS BILLY WALLACE

By JAMES MILLER
Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 7.—"Sweet Willyum" Wallace, once a shining star in the lightweight firmament, now is a topnotch crooner, but a washed-up fighter.

Wallace showed he has taken the turn in the fistic road in his bout with Sammy Fuller, of Boston, a contender for Tony Canzoneri's lightweight title, in the main 10-round feature of the annual Cleveland News Christmas Fund Show at the Public Auditorium here last night.

WALLACE IN SHELL

For eight of the 10 rounds, Wallace, with his chin well buried behind his left shoulder, just pawed with his left jab, refusing to open up and fight with the squat, short-armed Fuller, who was forced to get in close in order to throw punches to Wallace's body. This attack pulled in the verdict for the New Englander.

In the sixth round, the balcony boys brought their hands and feet into action, clamoring for more action, even the referee, Johnny Carr, continuously urged the boys to open up. Fuller was willing, but Wallace would not take heed. Fuller weighed 136½ and Wallace was one pound lighter.

One Adolf Heuser, of Germany, who resembles Mickey Walker in all departments when the Toy Bulldog really was up among them, fought for six rounds with his left eye completely closed and cut, to outpunch Eddie Simms, young Cleveland heavyweight, who outweighed the Teuton 16 pounds, in the 10 round semi-windup. The lad from the Fatherland, a fast-moving figure, possessed an equally swift left hook that kept Simms in hot water throughout most of the battle. Several times Simms belted Heuser with a sharp right to the chin, follew d by a resounding left hook to the midsection, but he failed to follow up such advantages, thus giving Heuser time to regain his bearings and come back to take the play away from him. It was one of the best fights on the card. Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, world heavyweight champion, was in Heuser's corner.

SLAUGHTER STOPS PIRRONE

Sammy Slaughter, Negro middleweight sensation, of Terre Haute, Ind., made it two in a row over Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, in another scheduled 10-round bout when he dumped the Forest City belter face down on the canvas for the full count in the fourth round. It was a straight right to the jaw, as Pirrone was coming in, that did the trick. Slaughter recently stopped Pirrone in Chicago. Bud Taylor's Negro also had Punching Paul on the floor in the second round for a seven count. Pirrone made a big bid for the fight in the third round, when he tossed a wicked left hook that landed flush on Slaughter's chin, dropping Sammy dead in his tracks for a nine count.

In his first fight in a year, Patsy Perroni, formerly of Canton, O., but now being billed out of Cleveland, won from old Honest Tom Heeney, the former hard rock from Down Under, who now is nothing but a stepping stone for the younger crop of heavies. It also was a 10-rounder. Perroni, who was in a bad automobile accident last winter, still is carrying scars over and under his left eye, and Heeney opened a cut over the spot in the eighth round. Charley Harvey, who is a "few" years older than his fighter, was Heeney's chief second.

NEBO DEFEATH ZWICK

Pete Nebo, of Tampa, Fla., who recently gave Kid Chocolate a close call in New York, defeated Phil Zwick, of Cleveland, in the eight-round bout. Nebo was entirely too ringwise for the lanky hometown right-hand puncher. Zwick's best blows failed to stop Nebo, who forever was coming in close with a sharp left hook to the head and body.

Jackie Davis, of Chicago, won a close one from Eddie Bojack, Cleveland welterweight, in the opening four-round bout.

Approximately 7,277 paid to see the annual fistic feast staged by Ed Bang, sports editor of the News, who acts as matchmaker. Admiral Richard M. Byrd, who was forced to quit his flight to Chicago in this city yesterday, due to bad flying conditions, was in the crowd and received an ovation. Many Pittsburghers attended.

Grid Body Plans Banquet for Monday

The annual banquet of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Officials' Association will be held in the green room at the Keystone Club at 6 o'clock Monday evening, it was announced today by A. Warren McMillan, chairman of the banquet committee.

JAAP ZONEYS' BIG STAR

By TOM BIRKS

The Castle Shannon Zoney soccer club of the Keystone League surely made a ten-strike, when Johnny Jaap, without doubt the cleverest soccer star ever to play in this district, was signed on his return from the Eastern Professional League.

When the other members of the Zoney forward line, especially Urbanic, who plays center forward, gets familiar with the famous Jaap touches, that front line is going to go places. It was Jaap's brilliant football that tangled the Curry defense last Sunday.

STARTED WITH ARDEN

Twelve years ago, Jaap, then a youngster, came down from the coal mines at Ellsworth to play with the Castle Shannon Juniors. His performances were so good that he was signed to play with Tommy Evans and his Arden team. The Arden inside trio composed of Mike Bookie, Jaap and Andy Brady was the greatest set of inside forwards ever seen locally. St. Louis fans well remember how this combination defeated Scullin in the semi-final round of the National Open Cup competition, only to have winning goals disallowed.

Following a great season with Arden, Bill Lewis, from Bethlehem Steel, came into the district looking for a capable center forward to replace Harold Brittain, the English star, who was hurt.

The writer suggested Jaap, who finally was ordered to report to Bethlehem.

He did not sign a professional contract, and being dissatisfied with conditions, returned to Pittsburgh. He went back later, and playing in practically every position on the forward line, was one of the great stars in the professional loop.

WENT TO SCOTLAND

When the Bethlehem team disbanded, Jaap returned to Scotland, the scene of his childhood, but soon returned to the United States and his first love, Pittsburgh.

Followers of the game should take a trip out to see the Zoneys in action and watch one of the finest and cleverest soccer players that ever kicked a ball in action.

CASEY RATES PITT SECOND TO COLGATE

By EDDIE CASEY
Harvard Coach.
Member, All-America Board of Football.
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

The football season of 1932 in the East did not run true to the predictions of the sport writers in early September. The favored teams at that time were Army, Yale, Harvard, Pittsburgh and Colgate. Of these five, Colgate and Pittsburgh survived with great records. Army had a good season, Yale a fair record, and Harvard was the least impressive.

Colgate stands out as the leader in the East. True, it may be said that Colgate did not have as stiff opposition as some of the others. But it did have two very hard games, with New York University and Brown. In both of these games it was evident that Colgate was vastly superior. The true greatness of the Colgate team is apparent when it is observed that it was not scored on in the whole season. Regardless of the strength or weakness of the opposition, any team that can go through a season with a goal line unsullied must have a remarkable defensive team. In my opinion, Colgate is the leading team of the East.

Next to Colgate would come without question Pittsburgh. This team has faced worthy opponents every week and has come through undefeated. Twice tied and winning some games by a narrow margin, the Panthers' strength and versatility has been shown week after week. What a great game it would have been if Colgate and Pitt might have met.

RAMBLERS JOLT CADETS

The Army team had been going on high all season until it met Pittsburgh and went down to defeat by a small margin. Undaunted, it picked up its stride again and began to look like a real champion until it met a great Notre Dame team. In this game the Cadets looked pretty ordinary, and this one game did more to rob the Army of prestige than any encounter they have had for years. But, all told, it has been a real successful Cadet team.

Yale started very slowly, and in the first month it looked like a disastrous year for old Eli. As the season rolled on, the Elis began to click, and coming into November they became a fine team. Winding up with victories over Dartmouth and Harvard, and holding Princeton even made a rather satisfactory ending for this season.

Princeton, as far as winning football games is concerned, had a poor season, but from every other angle had a most successful year. Starting the season with a new coach and a new system, it took some weeks to get started, but coming into the home stretch Princeton was becoming a great team. Michigan, the champion of the West, was fortunate to defeat this team by a narrow margin, and Yale was just as lucky to get a tie. It looks as if Princeton under Fritz Crisler is on the way to the football heights.

HARVARD FADES OUT

Conversely, to the start of Princeton and Yale, was the start of Harvard. Winning the first four games by large scores, the Crimson began to falter against Brown, and while they won from Holy Cross, they never really got going again and finished up the season with a defeat at the hands of Yale.

Columbia and Brown were two of the outstanding teams in the East, and it wasn't until the end of the season before Brown tasted defeat, and this from a great Colgate team. Both Columbia and Brown should be well satisfied with their records for the past season.

AMBRIDGE HIGH HONORS TEAM

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Ambridge High School football squad, winner of the class A championship of the W. P. I. A. L. during the season recently closed, will be honored at a testimonial banquet to be held this evening in the Junior High School dining room at Ambridge.

Ambridge citizens are elated over the great showing of Moe Rubenstein's champions during the 1931 season and they plan to show their appreciation in a fitting manner this evening.

The committee has arranged a fine program of speakers. Men prominent in district college circles are among the guests.

The Perry High School eleven will receive additional honors for winning the city championship tomorrow when the North Siders are guests of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon to be held in the C. of C. auditorium. The University of Pittsburgh will be honored at the same time for winning the collegiate championship of the city. Both Pitt and Perry will receive trophies.

Friday evening at the Tarentum Y. M. C. A. the Allegheny Valley football fans will pay tribute to the Springdale High School squad, which is sharing the class B championship with Glassport.

Leroy P. (Hank) Day, Wash-Jeff coach, will be the principal speaker at this affair. College football stars from all sections of the tri-state district will be among the honored guests.

The Monongahela High School basketball team opens its season tonight by engaging Clairton High on the Clairton floor. Monessen opens its season on Friday by battling with Bentleyville at Monessen.

Here It Is—Carver's All-America Whatisit

THE TEAM

ENDS—Laurel and Hardy.
TACKLES AND GUARDS—The Four Marx Brothers.
CENTER—Jimmy Durante.
QUARTERBACK—Benny Rubin.
HALFBACKS—Warren Heller and Luke Barnett.
FULLBACK—Baron Munchausen.

THE SCHEDULE

Christmas Day—Open.
New Year's Day—Shut.
Washington's Birthday—Strong Sing.
April Fool Day—Vassar.
Memorial Day—301 Sing.
July Fourth—Barber's College.
Coaches—Jimmy Walker and Bee Bernie.

By JESS CARVER

The outstanding feature of my all-America teams for 1932 is the almost total lack of football players. My team has a great backfield and an even greater line—one of the greatest, in fact, in history—other great lines being:

Jimmy Durante

Warren Heller

"I was sittin' up with a sick friend."

"Now, honey, that ain't powder on my shoulder—it's whitewash—"

"This is right off the boat."

"Ed Wynn's."

Most anyone can pick an all-America team, but it ain't everyone who can arrange a schedule, especially such a schedule as the one this team is to play. Every opponent we meet is famous, especially the one booked for the opening date—Open College. It must be famous; I see it on every schedule in the book.

This team may not be much of a defensive club, but, boy, oh boy, would it be offensive? And how it would! It would be the most offensive team you ever lamped. Imagine being double-barrel insulted by Luke Barnett and Groucho Marx? How you'd burn?

WHAT ENDS! WHAT ENDS!

Imagine those ends going down the field under a pint—pardon, I mean a punt! You'll have to imagine it—it's beyond me. Durante would be a better tackle than a center, but he has to play center because, with that snozzle, if he were placed anwyhere else, he'd always be offside.

There'd be a lot of passing in that backfield, especially passing of the buck. The kicking would be swell, too—especially when the meals were not on time.

Benny Rubin wouldn't be bad as a quarterback, any more than he would be as anything else. We needed a quarterback bad, and we got one.

This team would play a new style of defense—a 1-9-1. The first "1" would be Heller, the nine would be the rest of the team, except for Durante, who'd be in the stands selling peanuts.

We play Sing Sing twice because the chances are 10 to a dozen doughnuts that we'd leave half the club in the clink the first time and would have to go back and get 'em bailed out.

We ought to beat Vassar, but you can't tell. Those Vassar backs would bother the line.

AFRAID OF BARBERS

I'm afraid we'd take a trimming against Barbers' College. (I beg your pardon, Mister Pfarr), because they tell me those Barber backs can cut plenty. We'll have to be on razor-edge for this one.

The coaching situation would be swell. Bernie couldn't leave his band and Jimmy is in Europe, so the job is hereby assigned to the trainer, good ol' Tex Guinan.

Bugs Baer:

George Bernard Shaw:

Warden Lawes:

"Cell Block 69-B is being prepared."

The Marines:

All in all, this ball club would get along, and, if you'll give me my hat and stick and mod, Mister Keck, so will I.

SPORT VIGNETTES

While almost everybody else who visited Cleveland yesterday went there to attend the fights of last night, Dr. H. Clifford (Braddock) Carlson, the Pitt basketball coach, went there to attend a basketball clinic . . . He's holding one of his own at Pitt next Saturday, and, with the new rules to be taken apart and interpreted, he expects the biggest crowd of coaches, players, fans and just plain grandstand critics any sports clinic ever has drawn at Pitt.

New York is softening up when such a little thing as a riot at a wrestling show can toss it on its ear . . . And what caused all of the fuss? Nothing but the fact that Ray Steele was punching and gouging and slapping when he was supposed to be wrestling . . . This writer always has contended that punching in a wrestling bout was not wrestling, and had no place in the sport, but there were others who seemed to think it was all right, as a result of which we now have no wrestling . . . Which, as the game is hippodromed these days, probably is all for the best.

But here's a prediction: Some day there will be a turnover in the sport, and a group of really scientific wrestlers will be developed, and, with fouls punishable to the extent that they will be rarely committed, the mat game will come into its own in a real and honorable way . . . But it will resemble in no manner the hodgepodge that is misnamed wrestling today.

Harvey Harman, the Penn football coach and former Pitt star, is an outspoken young man . . . He shows this by the manner in which he comes out openly against the Gates plan, which installed him as coach of the Quakers . . . He views with alarm the coming of Pop Warner to Temple University as coach next fall, and predicts that Penn will have to step out and get football players and reward them with scholarships if it wants to keep Temple from moving out into the lead in Philadelphia . . . The Penn tendency has been in the opposition direction, with one eye seeking for the Carnegie Foundation's approval.

Harman recently attended the testimonial banquet here for Pop Warner and Jock Sutherland, and I asked him what happened to his team in the game with Ohio State a week after it gave Pitt a battle, and he said frankly: "Well, Don Kellett, our star kicker, was hurt at the very start of the game and wasn't of much value to us, and —(naming another player)—never was up to snuff, but he's the best I have and I had to use him." . . . There was no beating about the bush . . . What Harman has to say he says, and he leaves no doubt about his meaning.

The august A. A. U. has another "horrible example." . . . An outstanding personage in Babe Didriksen, banned because her name and picture were used in connection with a widely printed advertisement. . . . Bam! . . . On goes the ban, for all the world to know about it! . . . Business of finger-pointing. . . . "Shame, shame, shame, Professional! Shame!" . . . The charge is professionalizing her fame as an athlete. . . . And it's quite a bit of fame, too, since she was the outstanding woman contestant in the recent Olympic Games.

Now the investigation will follow, with the Babe being given a chance to prove her contention that she did not receive any compensation for lending her indorsement to the advertisement. . . . Why not the investigation first, before the ban? . . . Or MUST there always be "horrible examples" to be exploited to keep other amateurs in line? — HARRY KECK.

STANFORD MAY NAME COACH TOMORROW

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The Stanford University campus, excited following published reports several freshmen football players intended to follow Coach Glenn S. (POP) Warner to Temple University, where he has signed a contract, was calm today with formal denial of the report by the athletes.

A statement signed by Bob Hamilton, of Sewickley, Pa., and Bob Reynolds, of Okmulgee, Okla., freshmen backfield stars, and said to express the views of the entire freshman squad, explained the report originated when several of the men jokingly remarked they intended to journey East and continue to play football under Warner. The statement said:

"We came here to go to Stanford and we intend to carry on with the boys we know are with us."

Previously, Boy Grayson, a halfback, was reported as saying he came from Portland, Ore., to play under Warner and intended to go with him. Several other players were reported to be considering a transfer to the Philadelphia institution.

The board of athletic control at a meeting tomorrow will consider selection of a successor to Warner. Among candidates mentioned are C. E. (Tiny) Thornhill and Ernie Nevers, assistant coaches recommended by the freshmen players in their statement. Others mentioned included Andy Kerr, Colgate; Jock Sutherland, Pittsburgh; Clipper Smith, Santa Clara and Dick Hanley, Northwestern.

Warner was to bid goodbye to Stanford today—if sufficiently recovered from his cold to travel. Before going to Philadelphia, however, he will watch the Notre Dame-University of Southern California game in Los Angeles Saturday.

JONES CUTS SHORT TROJAN WORKOUTS

IRISH ORDER AMBULANCE AT TUCSON

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Fear that his University of Southern California football squad might become stale if given too much work in preparation for its game with Notre Dame here Saturday, has caused Coach Howard Jones to ease up on practice sessions.

Word filtered from behind the locked Gates of Troy the workout yesterday afternoon did not include even so much as dummy scrimmage and although the drill was brief, Coach Jones let it be known the remaining practice sessions would be even shorter.

MAY REST FRIDAY

The chances are strong there will be no workout the day before the game. Coach Jones, in cutting the practice schedule chose what he believes is the lesser of two evils, for some of the players have a tendency to put on too much weight when work isn't meted out in large doses.

The fact only two touchdowns have been scored on U. S. C. this year, both of them by air, has put supreme confidence in Trojan backers that the Ramblers are going to find it just as hard to crack the powerful line as did eight other teams.

Judging from past experience, the Trojans expect to find perhaps as much trouble penetrating the Notre Dame forward wall, which leaves the decision entirely in the air.

Bob McNeish, a sub half, is the best pass thrower on the squad, but Ford Palmer, an end, swings back to do some throwing, and both of the quarterback candidates, Homer Griffith and Irvine Warburton, pitch the ball with comparatively good success.

IRISH ORDER AMBULANCE

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Dr. Bernard Kamm, team physician of the Notre Dame football squad, has telegraphed orders for an ambulance to meet the Ramblers' train when it arrived here today, en route to Los Angeles for the game with Southern California Saturday.

It is understood that Ray Brancheau, a halfback, the latest influenza victim, would be taken to a hospital here for treatment. The team will remain in Tucson through tomorrow.

HUNK FAVORS TROJANS

By HEARTLEY W. (HUNK) ANDERSON

Notre Dame Football Coach.

There have been a lot of nice things said about Notre Dame and about myself since the victory over Army two weeks ago. The fine showing the team made in the game seems to have led people to expect us to win our game Saturday from Southern California without much trouble.

Hunk Anderson

They failed to remember, however, that the Army game was undoubtedly the best Notre Dame played all season, and that our offense had not been clicking in major games before we played Army. It is possible to get a team to the peak we reached against Army only about once a season. The players were in an excellent frame of mind and they played some of the best football I ever have seen. But that does not mean they will play the same kind of football next Saturday at Los Angeles.

In the first place, they have received a lot of praise where they had been getting a lot of criticism before the Army game. The criticism merely served to spur them on and to make them play better football. Our loss to Pittsburgh showed clearly enough the detrimental effect that a lot of newspaper praise can have.

Southern California has the advantage of playing on its own field under the weather conditions it is accustomed to, while our squad undergoes a light change of climate. Southern California also has the advantage of having won 18 straight games, two Pacific Coast championships and a national championship. They are on their way to a second consecutive national championship. They have developed a winning complex, and will be hard to beat on this account.

Our defeat at the hands of Pittsburgh showed Southern California that Notre Dame can be beaten, if the Trojans did not find this out last year when they won that 16-to-14 game from us.

I pick Southern California to win, although I think we will have a chance if our team is anywhere near the peak it reached against Army.

McCourt Opposes Greenwood Tonight

Charley McCourt, who brought the world three-cushion billiard championship to Pittsburgh several years ago, and Billy Greenwood, local star, will meet in a 50-point three-rail match to mark the formal opening of Charley Ellis' new billiard and bridge parlors, 328 Diamond street, at 8 o'clock tonight. They will meet in additional 50-point tests tomorrow and Friday nights.

McCourt, now of Cleveland, and Greenwood each recently won district elimination trials in the annual world title event, and are regarded as being the leading exponents of the game in their respective states.

Gene Tunney Tells Story of His Life

ship or railroad office. I hoped one day to be chief clerk and later advance to the position of port agent. It would be a long, hard road, but one that could be gradually traversed if I applied the necessary driving force. I had the ambition.

My interest in athletics was great, first, because I adored sports and, secondly, because I had an ambition to be well-developed physically. I yearned for a healthy, strong, athletic body. I avoided smoking, late hours and what habits I thought injurious.

FIRST EXHIBITION

During the first six months with the Ocean Steamship Company, while delivering bills-of-lading to various offices along Broadway, I saw in a window a demonstration of spring exercisers by a well-muscled man. Using up my spending money for two weeks I purchased a pair of these exercisers for 89 cents. Next to the boxing gloves I had received from my father, I got more use out of these spring exercisers than I did out of any other thing I have owned. If ever there was a person who got his money's worth it was I. I got up an hour earlier to do the course of exercises prescribed in the pamphlet that came with the apparatus.

At the request of a prominent member of the Knights of Columbus I agreed to go to a smoker held at a Knights of Columbus Council Hall at Twenty-third street and Second avenue, in New York, and box Willie Green. This was my first public exhibition and the third time to box Willie. The chairman of the entertainment committee told me he could get no one to work with Green. All the boys of the Villagers' Athletic Club, whom he had asked, threw their hands up in horror at the suggestion. By this time Willie had become pretty well established as a knocker-out of novices. Getting only a glass of ginger ale and a ham sandwich, a sock on the chin and no glory, was not appealing to the young athletes of the club.

I boxed Willie three rounds at this affair, and did much better than on the previous occasions when I had faced him. This probably was due to the fact that I had more room in which to get around. At any rate, I took my reward of a glass of ginger ale and a ham sandwich with great appetite.

On each of the three occasions that I had thus far boxed Willie I was conscious of the fact that he was trying to knock me out. Though in all our subsequent boxing he always had both barrels loaded, he never succeeded in hitting the bull's-eye. He seemed in a constant state of disappointment. The realization of his inability to flatten me ruined his life. He became a disgruntled man.

AN UNIMPRESSIVE BOUT

The fact that I had boxed the great Willie Green in an exhibition at the smoker got me quite a local reputation, and made me the recipient of many invitations to appear at other smokers. Moreover, the Villagers' Athletic Club had the reputation of being able to furnish five or six good bouts for any smoker at a moment's notice. The members were justly proud of this reputation.

It was shortly after the Green exhibition that I went over to Brooklyn, N. Y., to a smoker of the Presentation Catholic Young Men's Club to box an exhibition with Leonard Ross, a fellow member of the Villagers' Athletic Club. Douglas Carnegie, National A. A. U. 105-pound champion of that period, was also appearing in an exhibition. Carnegie was arranging a stag for a National Guard Cavalry troop, of which he was a member. He wanted to see some of the Villagers' Athletic Club boys and decide whether their knowledge of boxing would justify his engaging them to furnish some of the entertainment. He watched all matches with an eye for good material.

He picked all four matches furnished by the Villagers' Athletic Club that had been put on before Ross and I got into the ring to show our wares. After we finished Douglas said to Willie Ward:

"Willie, those first four matches that your boys had tonight were very good, but I am sorry I cannot ask Gene Tunney and Leonard Ross to appear at the smoker next week. You see, the troop pays five dollars for each match and expects to see some real boxing skill. Gene and Leonard are too awkward and wild. I am sorry about this. You'll let them know how it is, won't you?"

BECAME VERY ACTIVE

On our way home that night Willie Ward reluctantly advised me that I had not qualified for the big armory show and, to let me down easy, said:

"Gene, you were all right, but Leonard Ross is awfully wild and made you look very bad." One of the others told me the full story.

This disqualification in no way disheartened me. I continued to appear at all the smokers in and around the neighborhood for the next year or two, and those of my readers who remember that period in New York will know that they were many. At none of these smokers did I receive a cent of compensation; nor have I yet qualified for the armory shows. In most cases we paid our own carfare, and were rewarded at the end of our exhibitions with the usual glass of ginger ale and ham sandwich.

These smokers, which used to be so popular among the young men of New York 15 or 20 years ago, have unfortunately become things of the past. They were healthy and happy foregatherings of working young men and made an evening of fine amusement and entertainment. There was invariably beer, with soft drinks and sandwiches of all kinds. I never saw an exhibition of drunkenness or rowdyism of any kind. It was all clean, vigorous diversion, free from smut. I put on innumerable exhibitions at these affairs.

W. PA. OFFICIALS OFFER CUT

It looks as if the West Penn Basketball Officials' Association is going to go half way with the W. P. I. A. L. in the matter of cutting working fees.

According to present reports, Leo McGlinchey, president of the officials' organization, has notified George Cassler, chairman of the W. P. I. A. L. basketball committee, that the West Penn arbiters will work for $8 per game, instead of the $10 demanded previously.

The matter will be taken up by the league officials at a meeting Saturday. The W. P. I. A. L. also will decide whether to go along with the P. I. A. A. in the competition for the state title and will discuss the new 10-second rule. Many coaches in the vicinity favor ignoring the new edict.

In school basketball tilts played last night, Nate Lippe's fast Aliquippa team nosed out the W. P. I. A. L. champions of Braddock, 22 to 21; Pitcairn downed Bethel Township, 44-12; Scott won over Stowe, 46-15; Mt. Lebanon trimmed Munhall, 18-15; Swissvale downed East Pittsburgh, 23-13; Homestead defeated W. P. I. D., 25-13, and Butler downed Karns City, 32-12.

Crafton High Team Honored at Banquet

Dr. J. J. Corrigan was toastmaster. Among the speakers were H. Scott Schweinsberg, president of the Businessmen's Association of Crafton; Paul Abele and Al Krankota, of Duquesne University; Joe Tormey and Bob Hogan, of the University of Pittsburgh; Pop Wenrich, Crafton High coach; Val Schott, of the school board; E. O. Liggett, supervising principal of Crafton schools, and Julius Levin, of the Sun-Telegraph. D. T. Jonas offered the invocation.

A turkey dinner, prepared by the women of the First Christian Church, was given the boys. Seven seniors were presented gifts.

A. A. U. OPENS DALLAS PROBE

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Mildred Babe Didrikson, one of the world's greatest feminine athletes, is so eager to play amateur basketball this winter she has demanded an immediate investigation of her disqualification by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Miss Didrikson

And at the same time she expressed her desire to lead, as the elected captain, a team called the Golden Cyclones and sponsored by the insurance company for which she works, the 19-year-old Olympic games star reiterated her denial that she authorized use of her name or picture in a motor-car advertisement.

Insurance company officials have announced they will aid Miss Didrikson's fight for reinstatement, but it appeared likely she would not play on the basketball team until the matter was cleared up.

Miss Didrikson said she felt she had been wrongfully convicted on circumstantial evidence. She said she never had seen the testimonial for the automobile until it appeared in print. She admitted that several weeks ago she posed standing beside an automobile of the make advertised, but said she had told the Dallas agent of the company the picture could not be used until she turned professional, if ever.

The name of W. Foster Jacoby, of Dallas, director of city parks and secretary of the Texas A. A. U., was brought into the case when Miss Didrikson said he had asked her to sign an indorsement of an automobile, promising her that it would not affect her amateur standing. She stated she refused to sign and told Jacoby the use of her name in that connection would be against her wishes.

Miss Didrikson also said Jacoby had urged her to turn professional soon after she returned from the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. Jacoby could not be reached for a statement.

PAGE MAY GET CHICAGO JOB

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—H. O. (Pat) Page, Sr., former University of Chicago star athlete and present assistant to A. A. Stagg, today had become the leading candidate to succeed the "Old Man," as the Maroons' head football coach—as far as reports were concerned.

George Veenker, head coach at Iowa State College under Thomas N. Metcalf, who will replace Stagg as athletic director at Chicago next year, is expected to remain at the Iowa institution, having been named to succeed Metcalf, leaving Page as the foremost choice among the guessers.

It also was reported that Jimmy Phelan, who gave Purdue an undisputed gridiron title in 1929, before going to the University of Washington, also was in line for consideration.

The Stanford situation, created by the resignation of Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, also still held interest for Western Conference fans, for reports persisted that Dick Hanley, Northwestern's head coach, was under consideration.

STOCK MARKET MAKES SLIGHT HEADWAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Bulls, encouraged by the successful short squeeze late in the previous session, were more enterprising in today's stock market than they had been in some time.

The market modestly extended its gains of yesterday, while some of the more popular trading favorites were churned about in fair-sized blocks. On the whole, however, it was uphill work. Oils, mail order shares, some of the rails, and miscellaneous industrials were firm spots.

The strength of the oils evidently reflected reports that the Texas commission was considering another sharp reduction in allowable crude output in that state. Oil circles expressed the hope that such action would bring the recalcitrant companies into line with the recent increase in mid-continent crude prices. The petroleum statistics last week were none too favorable, showing a gain of 610,000 barrels in gasoline stocks, and a daily average increase in crude output of 28,300 barrels.

American Water Works cut its annual dividend rate to $1 from $2. While the action was not unexpected, it brought some selling into the issue. Selling of the gold mining issues evidently reflected the better tone of sterling exchange, and of commodity prices. Montgomery Ward has attracted bullish attention on the basis of its sales volume in the past several weeks, which is understood to have been sufficient to take operations into black figures, and cut into the losses of the first nine months of the year.

The rails seemed to respond to indications of a fair pickup in freight volume, after the sharp loss of the Thanksgiving Day week. Pennsylvania reported that cars handled in the week ended December 3 totaled 80,489, against 74,915 in the previous week. New York Central reported a similar gain. The latest theory advanced for the reported shifting by Union Pacific of an investment of 100,000 shares of New York Central into shares of Pennsylvania, is that it was done to establish a loss for tax purposes. The first hearings of the Coolidge National Transportation Committee were watched hopefully in railroad circles.

COTTON PRICE TONE MIXED

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Cotton futures opened steady, 2 higher to 1 lower on trade buying and southern selling. December, 5.70; January, 5.67; March, 5.77; May, 5.88; July, 5.97; October, 6.15.

The initial demand from the trade was readily supplied and active months sold about 2 to 3 points net lower during the first few minutes under southern and local selling.

Some further southern selling and liquidation was absorbed by continued trade buying and covering which was probably promoted by the action of the wheat and stock markets.

December contracts worked up to 5.66 or net unchanged, while January and later months sold about 3 to 5 points net higher, with May advancing to 5.92. The market at midday was quiet and steady within a point or two of these figures.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 7.—Cotton, no receipts. Spot, quiet; prices 2 points higher; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 5.87; good middling, 5.57; strict middling, 5.32; middling, 5.17; strict low middling, 5.02; low middling, 4.87; strict good ordinary, 4.67; good ordinary, 4.37. Futures closed steady. December, 4.89; January, 4.90; March, 4.92; May, 4.94; July, 4.95; October, 4.97.

RAIL PROGRAM SUBMITTED

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(INS.)—Equal regulation of all transportation agencies, including railroad, bus, domestic steamship and plane companies, by the Interstate Commerce Commission was advocated today by the Security Owners' Association.

Claiming the credit status of the railroads as "little short of deplorable," the suggestions of the association for improving conditions were presented to the national transportation committee, which is investigating transportation problems under the chairmanship of former President Calvin Coolidge.

The suggestions included:

1—Amendment of the Interstate Commerce act to include all forms of interstate transportation and to provide for their regulation.

2—Prompt consolidation of railroads into groups or "resign themselves to government ownership."

3—Substitute for present rate-making rule which would not require the Interstate Commerce Commission to make radical readjustments in rate structure from year to year in order to provide a certain return.

4—Need for immediate repeal of the recapture or earnings provisions.

TRADE ADOPTS RETRENCHING CRAZE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Emotionalism in the realm of public and private finance heightens the troubles of the human race.

Before the panic, there were excesses on the spending side. Now the pendulum has swung to a retrenchment craze.

It seems to me that there should at this juncture be resistance to further blind and indiscriminate cutting down, and that an intelligent effort henceforth should be made to balance income and outgo through emphasis on enlarging gross volume of business.

Mr. Rukeyser

Referring to pleas for immediate balancing of the federal budget, without due regard to the need for unemployment relief and other social services, Virgil Jordan, McGraw-Hill economist, speaking before the New York University conference on the relaton of law and business, said:

"We must go through with the grim, sardonic and delusive pursuit of higher private standards of life through lower public standards of living; we must save money on public employes and spend it on unemployment relief; we must avoid wasting money on public construction in order that investors may be encouraged to throw it away in excessive private competitive construction projects; we must avoid taxing public utilities and instead curtail their income by cutting down the municipal consumption of electric power and darkening our streets; we must encourage the steel companies by curtailing public expenditures and reducing taxes while we patriotically pay more for domestic than for foreign steel for public construction. We must go on giving heed to the admonitions of bankers and railroad presidents who demand drastic reductions in public outlays so that we may go on loaning public money to prevent bank failures and pay railroad deficits.

". . . Ultimately I hope there will be a return of reason and sanity which will show us once more the real significance of public spending for the stability of our economic system, and teach us the true meaning of economy and efficiency in public business at least as well as we have learned it in private business, where we now know that wise spending is the secret of steady prosperity."

POWER OUTPUT UP FOR WEEK

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—The National Electric Light Association reported today that power production in the United States increased last week, but the rise was considerably smaller than occurred in the comparable period of the preceding three years.

Output totaled 1,510,337,000 kilowatt hours, against 1,475,266,000 for the week ended November 26. This improvement of 35,069,000 compared with increases of, roughly, 71,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1931, 75,000,000 in 1930, and 88,000,000 in 1929. The percentage decrease from 1931 was 9.6, against a decline of 7.8 per cent in the previous week.

The Atlantic seaboard showed production as 7.7 per cent under 1931, against a recession of 5.6 per cent in the week before; New England alone, 7.3 per cent, against 3.7; Central industrial region, 12.3 per cent, against 10.2 per cent, and Pacific Coast states, 7.9 per cent, unchanged.

Denies Receiver For Publix Unit

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—A petition of the Reimar Holding Company for a receiver for the Film Production Corporation, a Paramount Publix subsidiary, was denied by Supreme Court Justice Isidor Wasservogel.

The court also refused an injunction to restrain payment of $10,000,000 worth of notes issued by the Film Production Corporation and indorsed by Paramount Publix to a dozen banks in this city and elsewhere.

The Reimar Holding Company, a Paramount Publix bondholder, alleged its rights had been violated when Paramount Publix put up 23 pictures to secure the notes.

Oil Output Gains, Gas Stocks Higher

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Domestic crude oil output during the week ended December 3 averaged 2,127,550 barrels daily, an increase of 28,300 barrels daily over the previous week, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

Gasoline stocks in the United States show an increase of 610,000 barrels on December 3, totaling 50,770,000 barrels.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

International Paper and Power Company reports for the nine months ended September 30 net loss of $5,275,571, compared with net profit of $1,971,204 in the corresponding period in 1931. For the quarter ended September 30 the company had a deficit of $3,001,567 compared with a loss of $1,806,236 in the preceding quarter and profit of $298,729 in the like 1931 period.

Interborough Rapid Transit Company reports October deficit of $190,879 after taxes, interest, Manhattan Railway dividend rental, etc., compared with profit of $321,978 in October, 1931. Deficit for the first four months of the fiscal year totaled $2,306,366 after above charges, as against deficit of $1,119,930 in the similar period of the previous fiscal year.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The ailing bond market took a turn for the better today and the financial doctors, while not altogether in agreement on a prognosis, were a little more cheerful than usual. United States government obligations firmed. The foreign section also joined the recovery.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column. United States bonds in eighths and thirty-seconds of dollars:

THREE WOMEN

By FAITH BALDWIN

Elizabeth and Louisa Clash When Joyce Decides to Leave the House

CHAPTER XLI.

Joyce lifted her chin. Her pallor was flushed now. She answered:

"Basil is sailing for England. I came up to say goodbye."

"I understand that," remarked her grandmother, "I can also see that you have made yourself quite at home."

"Mrs. Sheldon!"

"Be quiet," Louisa ordered the boy, her eyes upon Joyce. "Is this the first time you have been in this apartment?

"No!"

Elizabeth Sheldon put out a hand and felt for the smooth support of the wall. Her heart was beating so she thought she must die of it. She kept her eyes riveted, torn wide open, on Joyce's face.

"No? I thought as much. What a fool you must have considered me," commented Louisa bitterly. "I am to take it then that you are Lord Staines's—?"

Basil jerked forward. He did not notice the form of address. He shouted.

"Stop that! I love Joyce and she loves me."

Mrs. Sheldon looked at him a moment.

"But that is beside the issue," she explained, with a very dreadful gentleness. "The real question seems to be, are you going to marry her?"

JOYCE'S DECISION

Basil was beside himself with rage and resentment. He felt that he despised Joyce for forcing him into this detestable situation. He found his words coming thickly.

"I've asked her to marry me—over and over.

"Recently?" inquired Mrs. Sheldon.

"Oh—my God!" He flung himself about the room, he seized Joyce by the arm. "Tell her—tell her."

Joyce disengaged herself.

"It is quite true," she answered, "Basil asked me to marry him—as recently as 10 minutes ago."

Mrs. Sheldon drew in her breath. Her face was without expression. If she felt relief she did not exhibit it. She asked, "And when are you to be married?"

"Never!"

That was Joyce's voice, clear, buoyant. Now she knew. She would not be forced into marriage, not by this terrible old woman, not by her mother's working, pleading face, not by Basil and his possessive passion—by none of these would she be compelled. She was sorry for Basil, this thing was her fault—but neither pity nor passion could move her now.

Basil turned to the elder woman, his arms dropped to his side, lax, in a gesture of futility.

"You see?"

LOUISA INSISTENT

Mrs. Sheldon went on again, her voice roughened.

"You shall marry him, whether you wish it or not—and at once." She turned to her daughter-in-law and asked her, still in that voice that was like stones grating, "She will not find it so hard, will she, Elizabeth—if history is bent on repeating itself?"

Joyce saw her mother go white. She knew a puzzled wonder, a dim foreshadowing, but it passed. She was absorbed by the moment itself. She turned to Basil.

"I'm sorry," she said, "sorry. You see, I thought I loved you. I do love you, Basil, in that way. But not in any other. And it's not enough. I'm so sorry. I can't marry you, dear, I can't."

"Oh, Joyce," she begged her, "think! Think!"

"I have thought," said Joyce, gently, "and that's why I can't."

Mrs. Sheldon said, with sudden fury, "You shall—and if you don't—"

Joyce walked up close to the old woman. They were of an equal height, they looked one another directly in the eyes.

"I am not to be threatened," she said. "I am quite free. I will not marry Basil. And what can you do? Publish the story? Oh, I don't think you'll do that, grandmother. I'm sure you won't!"

"Joyce, don't go. Don't let this influence you, don't feel that it's the having-to that makes you obstinate," he begged, incoherently. "I understand, I think. But—"

"There's no use," she told him. "Goodbie, my dear."

She reached up, kissed him, before them all. Then she was gone. Mrs. Sheldon and Elizabeth stood there a moment.

"I—don't blame her," he urged suddenly. "It wasn't her fault. I loved her so much, you see, and she thought she loved me. I never dreamed that she really meant it—when she said—no."

His voice broke. Mrs. Sheldon turned away. She said, "Come," to her daughter-in-law. They had left, Basil stood looking after them. He thought he heard Joyce's light feet on the stairs. Was she coming back? Oh, she must come back.

He listened. The steps were silenced now. He heard the sound of the electric motor, the lift was descending.

SORRY FOR MOTHER

His head ached, he felt battered, singularly let down, an unheroic figure. He stepped forward, mechanically closed the door, looked at it blankly.

Ended. Over. He had lost her. She had never cared—never!

He whirled sullenly about and began to pitch things into a trunk.

Three women faced one another in an empty, echoing house. The furniture looked ghostlike, shrouded. Dust danced golden in the sun, a hot breeze limped through an open window, the trees of the park outside were dusty, dejected. Footfalls sounded in the basement, where Mrs. Hurst, the caretaker, moved about in agitation.

Elizabeth sat, tense, upon a straight-backed chair. Joyce and Louisa Sheldon stood. Joyce had tossed her hat to a couch, her bag on a table. She stood with her hands behind her, alert, waiting, not defiant.

They had driven directly to Washington square. Mrs. Sheldon, on reaching the street before Basil's apartment, had found Joyce waiting beside the smaller car. She had gone to her, ordered, "You will follow me." And Joyce had answered scornfully, "Did you think I'd run away?"

Now they were together, the three of them. Elizabeth was crying.

"Stop your noise," demanded Mrs. Sheldon, disdainfully.

Joyce moved a step nearer her mother. "I'm sorry for her—sorriest of all," she thought. She wondered, fleetly, why.

Louisa Sheldon spoke. Her voice was restrained, but it had not lost the hoarse, jerking quality. She looked directly at Joyce; she stood, straightening her bent shoulders, one hand laid heavily on the back of a chair.

TO LEAVE

"You are a disgrace to your name," she said. "A bad woman, an unspeakably ungrateful child. All the affection I have given you, the care I have lavished on you—gone for nothing. And there's nothing left but to hush this up and go on as if it had not happened. But you'll account to me, from this day forward. You'll drop your ridiculous classes. I know now what they were—blinds, so that you might meet your lover unquestioned. You have neither decency nor honor in you."

Go on as if it had not happened! Year in, year out, day after day, this sword of shame and knowledge suspended above her head.

"Oh," she told Louisa, urgently, "can't I make you understand? I've not been ungrateful—believe that. But, equally, I can't go on. You needn't bother about me any more. I can earn my living. I'll go. You may tell people anything you like. It doesn't matter to me. But I won't live here, Grandmother, nor anywhere, with you. Can't you see how absolutely impossible it is? I'll work out my salvation, by myself, in my own way."

"I've lived under your hatred for 20 years," Elizabeth said.

"If Joyce goes, I go!"

Louisa Sheldon glanced at her, with a sort of sinister amusement.

"You? And what would you do, pray? Like mother, like daughter—wantons, both of you!"

Joyce's arm closed about her mother. She felt how Elizabeth clung to her, how she shuddered, how she was wracked.

"If I have spared you, it was because I thought you deserved it. I no longer think so. She——" Louisa jerked a thumb at her daughter-in-law—"why should I spare her? She had no mercy on me. Tell your daughter, Elizabeth Howland, how you lured my son, how my son died in my arms, not having regained consciousness since the day he married you, how your child was born——!"

"Mother——"

"Hush," Elizabeth whispered, marveling that the arm about her did not relax, but tightened. Secure in that circle, she raised her head, met Louisa's eyes.

"A lair," said Louisa, shaking with an unholy laughter, "a pair—filth, both of you, filth," she raged, suddenly.

"I've lived under your hatred for over 20 years," she said. "You've kept me from life, you've kept me from love, you've kept me from my child. You've hated me always. It's been your passion, your indulgence. Shall I tell you—why?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Admission for this special show—and it will be a special show, in every sense of the word, with a special feature, newsreel, comedy and short subjects—will be a can or jar of food, bag of potatoes, or anything in the way of foodstuffs that the members might care to bring.

FOOD FOR NEEDY

The doors of the theaters will open at 10 a. m. and the theaters participating in these "canned goods" matinees will be the Arsenal, 4109 Butler street; Belmar, 721 North Homewood avenue; Cameraphone, 6202 Penn avenue; Etna-Harris, 433 Butler street, Etna; Harris South Hills, West Liberty avenue, Mt. Lebanon; Kenyon, 819 Federal street; Manor, 1729 Murray avenue; Plaza, 4765 Liberty avenue; Rowland, 913 Wood street, Wilkinsburg; Schenley, 3942 Forbes street; Sheridan Square, 6108 Penn avenue; Ambridge, Ambridge, Pa.; Memorial, McKeesport, Pa.; Washington, Washington, Pa.; Grand, Greensburg, Pa.

All the food collected at the door as the price of admission will be turned over to the relief agencies in the district in which the theater is located, and will be distributed by them to the poor of that particular neighborhood.

The managers, ushers, ticket sellers, ticket takers, motion picture operators and janitors are all donating their services, as part of their bit towards helping those less fortunate than themselves.

These matinees are not limited to members only. Any boy or girl that would like to contribute his or her share to this worthy cause will be more than welcome. After the special food matinees the regular meeting of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club will take place, with an entire new show. So boys and girls here's your chance to see two great shows this Saturday.

SCHENLEY SHOW

"The show Miss Gertrude Bales is sending to the Schenley Saturday, for the Junior Komic Club meeting, promises to surpass anything that has been put on here in some time. Miss Bales, you know, conducts one of the finest dancing schools in the city, and this is the first Junior Komic Club meeting where any of her pupils have appeared, so the members attending the meeting this week are going to be surprised.

"Carl Steinmetz's interpretation of an English clog dance will amaze the members, and Betty Wagner's toe strut will bring rounds of applause. Betty, by the way, is the daughter of Honus Wagner, famous old-time shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates."

In the list of children who are going to participate in this mammoth show, which was published here Monday, the name of one little girl, Lynn Dornshield, was inadvertently omitted. Lynn will offer for the amusement of the members a waltz clog.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

South Hills—Virginia Scanga, Mary A. Dee, Alice Donges, William Merkamp, Eleanor Border.

No More Great Experiments

The great experiment is skittering on its rubber legs. With this Congress we hope the American public breaks loose from the reformer's chicken wire and gallops over the hills.

They've been making optimistic tests on us for 12 years. They told us what we couldn't have and when to take it.

But now the guinea pigs have busted out of jail. See if we can make another great experiment. Let's try a dozen calendars without professional reform.

At that we think it was a good thing it happened. We went through it and came out the other side. We can look back and see our mistakes. The Eighteenth Amendment is one of those things that happens when you let a boy have his own way too much.

The writer saw the effects of local option long before it became national. You cannot change a man's habits after the habits have changed the man.

You cannot reform by legislation. All you can do is punish. And if a man wants beer he is going to get it if his next appointment is guest of honor at the Delaware whipping post.

The reformers defeated themselves when they eclipsed the horrible example from the pastoral panorama. In every town there was a horrible example. He was the world's best warning against the shoals of intemperance.

No boy in town wanted to grow up and look like the horrible example. And we would bring him back and put him on the government payroll. Put one in every town for the young folks to heed and profit thereby.

Every prohibitionist lecturer carried a horrible example with him. It was something we could look at and understand. He was more efficacious than all the amendments in the Constitution. We all knew he didn't get that red nose from pouring too much vinegar on his cabbage.

Twelve long years have arrived and departed. The great experiment will soon be a memory for which there will never be a minute of testimonial silence.

We figure it had to happen once. But now that it is over why not sidetrack all future amendments and call the Constitution of the United States a closed book?

BEAT AT LAST!
AGONY OF PILES!

Suffer no longer the torment of Piles! Walk, sit and sleep in comfort. Go to the stool without dread. For the relief of Piles has now been solved. Whether painful, itching, bleeding, blind or protruding Piles, the effective treatment is supplied in Pazo Ointment.

Pazo not only stops the pain and itching and make defecation easy, but it tends to correct the condition of Piles as a whole. This is because Pazo is threefold in effect. It is (1) soothing, (2) healing, (3) absorbing. Thus, it not only allays the inflammation and repairs torn tissue, but actually reduces the swollen blood vessels, which are Piles. The method of application makes Pazo doubly effective. (See picture below.) Thousands say that Pazo is the first real relief they ever got from Piles. Thousands say it saved them the need of a painful operation. Try Pazo yourself and realize from one trial that your days of pile suffering are over. All drug stores sell Pazo in Collapsible Tube with special Pile Pipe, complete for 75c.

The PAZO Collapsible Tube and Perforated Pile Pipe makes it very easy to apply the Ointment high up in the rectum where it can reach and thoroughly cover all the affected parts. Complete interior treatment in all cases of Piles is plainly important.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY

Mrs. Fate

PEGGY'S ENGAGEMENT TO THE SCION OF A WEALTHY FAMILY OCCURRED SOONER THAN EXPECTED, BUT WAS NO SURPRISE TO A MOTHER WHO YEARS AGO PLANNED EVERYTHING BUT THE DATE OF HER DAUGHTER'S WEDDING.
MRS. ROBERT GRUBBER! WELL I SUPPOSE PEOPLE WILL SAY IT WAS JUST FATE, BUT THEY SHOULD KNOW HOW OFTEN I'VE LAID AWAKE AT NIGHT ARRANGING THINGS SO FATE WOULDN'T GET THE NOTION PEGGY'S WEDDING WAS JUST ANOTHER BUNGLE GETTING MARRIED.
HOW PEOPLE'S EYES WILL STICK OUT! ESPECIALLY WOMEN WHOSE DAUGHTERS MARRIED THOSE BEFORE-THE-CRASH MILLIONAIRES.
HA, WHAT I WENT THROUGH IN THOSE DAYS TRYING TO LOOK CHEERFUL ABOUT PEGGY'S PROSPECTS.
WELL, THINGS ARE DIFFERENT NOW, AND I WON'T FORGET TO LET SOME OF MY EXTRA-ARISTOCRATIC FRIENDS KNOW IT TOO.
WOMEN WHO, I'M POSITIVE, THOUGHT I'D GET ONE OF THOSE SON-IN-LAWS WHO HAS TROUBLE WITH HIS WIFE'S PEOPLE EVERY TIME THEY GET UP NERVE TO ASK HIM ABOUT PAYING BOARD.
MRS. ROBERT GRUBBER! HA! WHAT A DISAPPOINTMENT THAT WILL BE TO JUST DOODLES OF PEOPLE.
ESPECIALLY TO THOSE WHO, I KNOW, ALWAYS FELT SURE PEGGY WOULD MARRY ONE OF THOSE MEN WHO EXPECT TO BUY EVEN THE MARRIAGE LICENSE ON TIME, AND WHO THINK A COUPLE OF SPARERIB SANDWICHES AND A RIDE ON THE STREETCAR IS A HONEYMOON.

Q. & A. DEPARTMENT

Q.—

I often ride the same street car you take going home, and I notice you always slip off your shoes. Why is that? —Curious.

Ans.—

Curious, indeed! Well, Sir or Mrs., as the case may be, it happens that Auntie B. has arch trouble, and if everybody would take off their shoes after boarding a street car it wouldn't be so bad for those who get their feet stepped on. I am setting an example which I hope will sweep the street car riding public like a prairie flower, or, that is, prairie fire I mean to say.

Democracy at Stake

"Government by the People" Is a Mockery When Crooks Can Alter Election Returns with Impunity.

While judgment on the guilt of the accused is, of course, to be suspended until the courts have passed on the question, the action of the County Commissioners in causing informations to be made against four persons, including two city policemen, for alleged violations of the election laws, is to be welcomed.

These are the first prosecutions to be instituted in connection with the recent election, and in the meanwhile evidence of fraud and intimidation continues to pile up.

It was reported yesterday, for example, that large discrepancies have been found between the election boards' figures and those of the recount board in the Eighth and Tenth districts of the Twenty-third Ward, that 20 ballots were missing from the box in the Fifth District of the Twenty-fourth Ward, and that a large slit was found in the bottom of the Sixth District box.

"Government by the people"—democracy—is a mockery when the people's will can be thwarted with impunity by ballot box crooks.

David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, has telegraphed Attorney General William D. Mitchell, asking him to send federal investigators to run down the crooks.

John G. Frazer, president of the Allegheny County Bar Association, has appointed a committee of five lawyers to investigate election fraud.

With all these agencies at work it should not be an insuperably difficult matter to catch the ballot box crooks and bring them to justice.

The most discouraging feature of the business is the attitude of the judges, who virtually destroyed the value of last year's campaign against election cheats by showing leniency to all of the 77 against whom verdicts of guilty were obtained. They sentenced only 22 of the 77 to jail, and of these 22 paroled seven before they had served a day and the others before they had completed their terms.

One of the most encouraging things is the attitude of such civic leaders as Senator Frank J. Harris, who, in an address at Harrisburg yesterday before the Pennsylvania Election Laws Conference, warned leaders of the Republican party they were storing up trouble "by the arrogant attitude of the party toward the common citizen, and the ignoring of his right to have his vote registered as cast."

This was pretty plain talk, and was doubly impressive coming from a man who has himself stood high in the councils of the party.

"In my own county," said Senator Harris, "fraud goes boldly on, notwithstanding the many detections and subsequent arrests, indictments and convictions. These warnings have proved no deterrent, and adequate election laws must be set up to control the dishonest politician who has no desire for clean elections.

"If the Republican party has the intelligence to see this situation and the courage to face it, they will meet the voter half-way at least. They will say to him that they will do all in their power to set up machinery to safeguard his ballot from those who seek to use it for their own ends. They will then endeavor, when in office, to so administer the affairs of the government as to justify the confidence of the voter. If they do this, they will have no need to rely on dishonest elections to be maintained in power."

Senator Harris and many other thoughtful citizens believe the situation will be improved by the adoption of a bill providing for permanent registration. The proposed election code that was offered to the Legislature at the session of 1931 and defeated has a number of other provisions which would help to make cheating more difficult, and it is to be hoped the Legislature will act favorably on them.

Senator Harris' warning should have salutary effect not only on the Republican leaders and the Legislature, but also on the courts. He voices the determination of the people to take the government back into their own hands by seeing that their ballots are counted as cast.

Eliminate Official Cars

There Is No Good Reason Why the Taxpayers Should Pay for Officeholders' Automobiles.

Philadelphia City Council points out one way of reducing municipal government expenses. It has voted to sell all city-owned automobiles used by officials except those of the Fire Bureau. By thus eliminating maintenance charges and chauffeurs' salaries the city expects to save $300,000 next year. Heads of county offices are also to lose their official cars and chauffeurs.

Pittsburgh and Allegheny County hardly would save by such a move as much as Philadelphia, but would save enough to make the proposal worth while.

We can think of no good reason why the taxpayers should have to pay for automobiles for Mayor Charles H. Kline or the County Commissioners or other officials who do not need cars, except on rare occasions, for any other purpose than to transport them between home and office.

Prison Visiting

An Old Custom Is Being Revived, Which Under Favorable Circumstances Should Have Good Results.

The story in the Sun-Telegraph about the actress who is trying to sell a mounted black bear sent her by a prisoner in the Western Penitentiary is particularly timely because the Pennsylvania Prison Society is trying to establish just such friendly contacts between prisoners and the public.

It announces that it is working towards a revival of interest in the old custom of prison visiting. It hopes to find persons acceptable to the prison management and properly qualified who will be willing to do friendly visiting with individual prisoners. The society has thus far appointed visitors in 10 counties of Pennsylvania.

England, with 10,000 prisoners, has almost a thousand prison visitors. The plan has had good results abroad, and should have a beneficial influence in this state.

Business Leaders On Trial; Alertness Will Help Prestige

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

IT is childish for businessmen to sit back passively until March 4 to find out what the new administration intends to do.

Since business leadership itself is on trial, it would be criminal to waste the intervening three months before inauguration day.

To justify themselves, business executives are called upon to display a revival of the spirit of adventure and initiative.

The country needs a revival of old-fashioned aggressive pursuit of profits, instead of a continuance of the epidemic of retrenchment and pessimism.

To the extent that business leaders throughout the country catch the spirit of aggressiveness, they will regain the confidence of the people, which has been greatly disturbed.

IN an interview in "The Nation's Business," President-elect Roosevelt said there would be as much governmental interference with business as may be necessary, but only so much.

"Initiative, enterprise and self-reliance," Mr. Roosevelt was quoted as saying, "always have been, and in the long run must continue to be, our safest guaranty of material well-being. They should not be impaired. But they should not be abused to the point of public injury.

"So, when you ask me what I would do to correct the abuses I have described, I ask what business itself is going to do. Will the better elements in the business community, such forces as the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, responsible trade associations in the finance and utilities field, and the leaders of legitimate investment banking business, set up standards for the issuance, promotion and sale of securities which will conserve effectively the public interest in such affairs?"

MR. ROOSEVELT made it clear that, in the absence of effective voluntary action by business leaders, he would attempt to marshal the forces of government to protect the public welfare.

Hospitable to progressive ideas, Mr. Roosevelt might well consider recommending the creation of a peace-time war industries board to act as a steering committee, a co-ordinating agency, and a planning board for American business.

What's Worth While?

By Winifred Black

If you were a young woman just starting out in life, and somebody asked you: "What do you consider really worth while for you in this world?" what would you reply?

Clothes, admiration, money, social position, a career on the stage, your name in "Who's Who" as a writer?

Do you want to go into business for yourself and make money, have your own apartment and your own latchkey and your own personal maid, and a lot of women friends who call you Billie, or Pete, or something like that?

Are you just crazy to go to Hollywood and be in the pictures and appear "in person," and have thousands of people writing to you for your autograph, and maybe have a new lipstick named after you?

Do you want to start out and reform the world, tell your neighbor what's right and what's wrong, and then wonder when your neighbor acts a little uppish about taking your advice?

Or do you feel that you must write, or die?

Would you like to teach? Would you like to be an architect, or an artist, or maybe—Sh-h-h; don't speak so loud—an artist's model, with your picture on the cover of all the smart magazines?

Or maybe you just wish you could be married, and settle down, and make a home for some tall, handsome, fascinating man with a bank account, and a car or so?

Children? Maybe you want them. There are still some women who do. What are you going to do with them when you get them?

Let them eat and drink like natural human beings or put them on a studied diet of calories and vitamins, weigh them every few days, make a study of them, as if they were some sort of strange bugs under a microscope?

Or do you just want to love them, or pet them, and spoil them, and have them grow up and turn their backs on you and not care the snap of a finger whether you live or die?

And maybe the tall, handsome man will be in love with somebody else, and you'll have to pick up someone who is neither tall, nor handsome, nor rich, nor awfully clever. And how will you like that?

Will you like wearing cheap clothes, getting up early in the morning in a rather coolish flat and getting breakfast for "Him," then spending the rest of the day cooking and cleaning, washing and ironing, and having everything arranged so that you can be at the door smiling when "He" puts his latch key into the keyhole?

Or maybe you expect to get a job and keep it, even after you're married. The delicatessens are so good these days, you'd be surprised! The nicest little biscuits you ever saw, all sealed up in a box, and all you have to do is to slip them into the oven and, in 10 minutes, there you are! Why, you can even buy your bread all ready sliced; did you know that?

Everything is made easy for women these days—everything but real love, and real marriage, and a real home. These things seem to get more and more difficult every day in the year.

When your mother married, she was married, and that was that! The story was over, and everybody knew exactly how it would end.

If you marry today you may stay married, and you may be stepping along the busy streets one year from your wedding day looking for another wedding. Nobody knows how often you'll go through the ceremony.

Love, and friends, and health, and good humor, and some intelligence—if you have these things, everything is worth while.

You can work in the basement of a big department store, and work for next to nothing a week—and be happy.

And you can live in a magnificent home, and have half a dozen servants to jump at your command—and be miserable.

Marry-Go-Round

When a Man Falls in Love

Sometimes a man's love-making, like a fancy Christmas card, is so elaborate and highly colored that the real sentiment is completely lost.

* * *

You can tell just by the alacrity or the reluctance with which a man hangs up the telephone receiver, whether the girl at the other end is a hangover from last summer or a brand new prospect.

* * *

It is always a shock to a brilliant woman to find that a man has fallen in love with her because he finds her "so soothing and restful," instead of because he finds her "stimulating and distracting."

Most of the women who have "made history," says the Cynical Bachelor, have begun it by making trouble for some. Page Eve, Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, Samson's Girl Friend, Delilah, and the rest all down the line.

* * *

* * *

It takes the average woman from six months to six years, to get her husband going along smoothly on the single-track of marriage—and another woman from six minutes to six weeks to derail him.

A woman may lose all her illusions about a man, and still go right on loving him; but when he starts wrecking her illusions about herself, her love turns to vinegar.

* * *

Most little girls lose their romantic ideals and their illusions about the male sex, these days, about the time when they lose their belief in Santa Claus.

Many a woman has made a lifelong friend out of a man just by divorcing him.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—For the majority of defenders of the lagging legitimate theater, it was happy news that the first smash hit of the season was sponsored by John Golden. His triumph, as usual, was a bull's eye. With a play as clean and fragrantly sharp as peppermint.

Golden, of all producers, has clung to what the Rialto considers shop-worn ideals. He does not believe the stage needs smut. Not only that, he justified this belief in an array of successes. Such as "Lightnin'," "Turn to the Right," "Seventh Heaven," "The First Year," etc.

His mind falls naturally into cleanliness, just as Dudley Malone's face falls into the chubbiness of a happy baby. He is not a prude. He likes a cigar, his highball, and a night out with the boys. He chuckles at the Rabelaisian tale, but he prefers it in the smoking room.

No one thinks of him as a reformer. He simply is a magician with the commonplace. If he needs a butler in a play, he uses his own butler and tells him to be himself. He is the sort of realist in the theater that Trollope was in English literature.

Time after time, he has demonstrated that the ordinary beats the exotic at its own game. Instead of obscene innuendoes, his plays are garlanded with light philosophy in quaint phrasing. He is one of the untheatrical temperament, infatuated with the theater. The sort eternally puttering about a Great Neck garden.

In Golden's offering is the fatuously facetious Spring Byington, an actress too little seen but always making her role hum. She is the theater's most expert female flutterer, one of those arch ladies forever popping in at the wrong moment to blandly siphon the wrong remark and toss an entire household neck deep in confusion. Some day she will simper to stardom!

By post today, came an absorbing letter, which, suddenly and for no reason, concluded with this chilling entreaty: "Hoping you make some small payment on this long overdue account, I am, etc." I might have known before looking, it was from Fred C. Kelly.

* * *

Kelly likely is the only scribbler to squeeze profits from the market during the past three hectic years. Five years ago, as the result of orders on the subject from magazine editors, he became interested in speculation. He began some mild experimentations in the monied marts, and, like everybody, won. Furthermore, he anticipated the crash, protected himself and has kept on winning in a small way since.

On a Seventh avenue corner, in the heart of the Roaring Forties, an all-night and all-day recreation room for weary boulevardiers has opened. It is called The Playground, and the large space is trinketed with innumerable diversions, played on tables. Such as hockey, bowling and baseball. Its busiest period is after 3 a. m., when various dice and poker games, floating from hotel to hotel, break up, and professional gamblers drop in for relaxation before breakfast and sleep.

Will Rogers was one high-salaried actor in America who did not invest a dollar in securities. There was a time he was tempted. It was while he was pinch-hitting for Fred Stone at the Globe. Eddie Cantor was on his fifth million and Jolson in the billions. He journeyed to Wall street to talk it over with his friend, Bernard Baruch. Baruch told him to forget Wall street and intimated that the future was not too rosy. Rogers, a prodigious saver, has every penny in real estate, mostly around Los Angeles. "At least," he says, "I have something to ride over."

In an East Side meander today—I can kiss myself into more sweet messes—I idled before a huddled, overcoated figure playing solitaire on a box in front of his shop. Finally, I ventured: "The black Jack on the red Queen!" He pushed over his box and leaped up in blazing wrath. And, in what I judged to be Yiddish, did he blow me out of the water! Then, his fat wife waddled out, also two neighbors from next door joined in. I don't know why it made them so mad, but, as usual, caught in such embarrassment, I skittered like a pony from his first saddle, ridiculously dusting off my hands and coughing off key.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

We were talking about clothes. How things have changed in the last 10 years! All these new shops, with the pretty smart dresses so cheap. Two-for-fifteen, though they look like a million dollars. And how lucky it is for the modern girl that she can have so many inexpensive dresses.

"I'm not so sure it is lucky," said Ruth.

Ruth Evans is a popular hostess in a girls' hotel. She's young enough to be sympathetic, and she knows the inside stories which most older women don't hear.

"I think it's probably the most unfortunate thing that could have happened to girls," she went on, as we stared our surprise.

"No, I'm not going to preach against pretty clothes. You know I like them as much myself as anyone. But I think that all this cheap, snappy dressing is making more trouble that we realize yet.

"It isn't just that it tempts a girl into extravagance. I never blame youngsters much for extravagance. They'll have to figure close enough later on. But it starts a girl off wrong. It helps a girl to appear to be something that she isn't, and it puts ideas into her head that are apt to spoil her whole life."

"But doesn't dressing nicely develop a girl's ambition and improve her standards?" someone said.

Ruth laughed. "That depends on whether she has enough sense to have real ambition and standards. Some girls have. But the average youngster has only one desire—she wants to make a good marriage. And I honestly think these cheap dresses that 'make her look like a million' are spoiling her chances.

"You see, the average girl, if she's to be happy, should marry the average boy. They share the same background. They have the same interests. Their mating is a natural, and it used to come off as a matter of course. But it isn't a matter of course any more, and I think that clothes are largely to blame. The movies, too, of course.

"When the average boy gets a job it means working in greasy overalls in a garage, or in a butcher's apron behind some counter, or in a carpenter's overalls, just as his father did.

"But when the average girl gets a job, she doesn't go on living in the gingham which her mother wore. No; she steps, with her first pay check, into synthetic silk and imitation ermine, with a style copied from the latest Hollywood melodrama. Then somebody tells her that she looks just like Greta Garbo or Constance Bennett or Joan Crawford—and right there the trouble starts.

"She doesn't stop to think that the mechanic she despises because of his greasy overalls has as much intelligence as she has, and is probably making three times as good a record as a worker; nor does she ever have any doubts as to her own ability to live on a Barrymore plane if she should ever crash the gates. She knows that she looks the part, and that's all she wants to know.

"As a result, girls are turning up their noses at offers which they would once have accepted eagerly—and spending their lives in a feverish waiting for The Grand Chance that never comes.

"But, of course, it's a great thing for the little shops; for every pay day there's a new dress and accessories to match the dream. So trade goes—"

Is it working out that way with the girls of your acquaintance? Is the "Average Boy" in your set marrying the girl he went through Hi with—or is she strutting her pretty stuff in a psuedo-Parisian model and waiting for Clark Gable to come along?
